If You Insist, Says Japan. Russian Girls and Sailors. Two Billions for Farmers. Let Mothers Decide.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

COL. TAKAHASHI, military attache of the Japanese embassy at Peiping, says:

"If Russia wants to fight, we are ready for war immediately."

Japan, says he, does not want to fight, but:

"We are unable to tolerate the eastward expansion policy of the Soviet, which is intended to tint all Eastern Asia red."

Col. Takahashi refers to the red tint of Communistic doctrine.

If Japan should start war with Russia, there would be red of another kind, caused by dropping bombs from Japanese and Russian planes, a "red" tint older than the theories of Karl Marx.

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S London Express says five Russian girls, sent to prison for two months, accepted presents from foreign sailors.

There was no question of morals. Stern Russian Communism says Russian girls must not fall in love "with representatives of capitalistic countries," because "taking a present from a capitalist is equal to conspiracy against the Russian state."

The first Catherine of Russia is supposed to have saved from capture Peter the Great, who changed her from a laundress to an empress, by bribing a Turkish general with her magnificent jewelry.

What would modern Russia say about that?

MR. WALLACE, Secretary of Agriculture, predicts an increase in American farm incomes this year of two thousand million dollars, one thousand dollars each for twenty million farmers, a sum worth while.

Of course, other citizens will pay these two thousand million dollars, for you can't take two billions out of thin air.

Besides the two billions extra, the government will hand to farmers this year seven hundred and sixty-one million dollars, in rental and benefit payments, connected with plowing under crops, or abstaining from planting them. The consumer and the taxpayer will "absorb" these amounts.

THE FARMERS have one small fly in the prosperity ointment. Farm hired men are going to work for Uncle Sam's CWA. Government made-to-order jobs, intended for the "impoverished and unemployed," are taken by the men that leave industries and farms to get the government's better pay and easy work.

With a farmer watching, you must work. On a government job, you work just hard enough to keep from freezing, which is better, in the opinion of many.

THE HOUSE, listening to demands for repealing of laws against circulating birth control information, is told by one witness that a country that must cut down supplies of pigs, cotton and wheat ought not to worry about birth control, or excess population.

A lady replied that a country with twelve millions living on made-to-order jobs, at taxpayers' expense to save them from idleness and hunger, has population enough.

One important fact, by which the House might be guided, is that the prosperous, who can afford to pay doctors, have all the birth control information they want. Only poor mothers are kept ignorant by laws, the mothers that cannot give proper care to big families.

Why not let the mother decide how many children she wants?

AS A RESULT of the Stavisky scandal, in which foolish French investors lost forty million dollars, two modern French duels, in which nobody is hurt much, are expected.

One was provoked by a colored deputy from Martinique, Joseph Samuel Lagrosilliere, who slapped the face of Deputy Ferry. In the other duel, the Minister of Education will fight a deputy. You might insure the lives of all four duelists, and lose nothing.

It was not so when Clemenceau, the French Tiger, was young. Of him it was said that politicians "feared both his pen and his sword."

If he couldn't get satisfactory results with his pen, he used his sword in a duel, a double danger for the other man. He reversed the old pen and sword proverb.

BRITAIN DISCUSSES, with excitement and some incredulity, what is now "the famous monster of Loch Ness," near Inverness in Scotland.

Dozens of reputable citizens swear they have seen this huge monster, of "sea-serpent" type. And now four reliable Benedictine monks declare that they have seen the fearful creature several times.

The abbot of the monastery, familiar with Loch Ness for half a century, believes in the monster, and thinks it dates back to the Devonian period, that ended many millions of years ago. It has had time to grow.

10 ACQUITTED IN NUMBER WRITING VERDICT

Guilty Held Members Of Slain Hacker's Racket Ring

Nine members of the alleged Rankin numbers writing gang of Andy Garavini, slain hacker, were found guilty and 10 were freed by a jury in Criminal Court today.

The verdict was reached after the jury had deliberated nearly eight hours and was read at the opening of court today before Judge Frank P. Patterson.

Those convicted of conducting a lottery were: Sam Ecker, Ted Putz, Daniel Pastor, Charles R. Zamal, Anthony Rubbo, Victor Bonacci, Ralph Cuccoro, William Ferguson and Sol Horr. Cuccoro and Ecker also were found guilty of conspiracy.

Those cleared were Alvin Duffy, Russell Zimmerman, Paul Whalen, John Mulligan, Leo Peterson, Joseph Goodman, Sidney Bahm, Terrence Horgan, Leo Ferrini and William Kaler.

Garavini and the others had been arrested in Garavini's alleged headquarters over a garage at Fifth avenue and Hawkins street, Rankin, September 5, by a squad of 10 state troopers from the Greensburg barracks, led by Sergt. V. J. Bunch. A large quantity of paraphernalia was confiscated.

Within less than six weeks Garavini was shot down in front of the William Penn Hotel by Iggy Swartz in a jealous quarrel over Garavini's wife, who had formerly been married to Swartz.

A small hand truck was hauled into the courtroom, laden with 10 adding machines, six and a half cartons of numbers slips and two and a half cartons of slips from the adding machines. Bunch said this equipment had been seized in the raided room. He said $64 had been seized in the money drawer and $923 had been taken from the men placed under arrest. He charged some of the men were numbers writers and others worked in the headquarters. He said they operated through the Monongahela Valley towns.

First Lady Visits At Warm Springs

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is paying Warm Springs an unexpected visit.

The First Lady came here with Miss Lorena Hickok for a weekend of rest, motoring yesterday from Atlanta. It was several hours after her arrival that residents of the community, except officials of the Warm Springs Foundation, knew of her presence. She plans to leave Monday for Washington by airplane if the weather allows.

ASKS U. S. RAIL CONTROL DELAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Answering the first of a series of questions asked him by Congress, Joseph B. Eastman—federal co-ordinator of transportation—held today the time was not ripe for either nationwide consolidation of railroads or government ownership.

His answer to the query, "Is there need for a radical or major change in the organization, conduct, and regulation of the railroad industry which can be accomplished by federal legislation?" was transmitted to President Roosevelt and the House and Senate by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which the law requires to study and comment on his findings.

Eastman concluded:

"The ultimate solution of the railroad problem is public ownership and operation.

"The country is not now in a condition to stand the financial strain of acquisition of these great properties.

"A grand consolidation plan is impractical at this time because the country is not in condition to stand a forced consolidation."

HOUSE SET FOR VOTE ON DOLLAR

Stabilization Fund Time Limit Fought

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—The Roosevelt dollar devaluation bill was speeded toward House passage today to the accompaniment of a denial that President Roosevelt is willing now to accept a definite three-year limit on the proposed $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund.

Chairman Somers, of the House Coinage Committee, told newspapermen:

"The President doesn't want the life of the fund limited to any period."

Both the Senate Banking Committee and the House Coinage Committee received additional testimony on the administration's fiscal legislation, while House Democratic leaders pressed for a vote late today or tonight.

The administration has urged enactment of the measure by Tuesday to assist in pending government financing.

Somers added that an amendment accepted by the President requiring a "general report" to Congress in three years would give Congress a chance to end the operation of the $2,000,000,000 fund.

A protest of "star chamber proceedings" came from a Republican member of the Senate Banking Committee when Democrats sought to limit hearings on the monetary legislation.

2 ATTACKED, ROBBED OF $1,500

Pair Carrying Money To Downtown Bank Held Up

Carrying the day's receipts of almost $1,500 to a nearby bank, two employes of Dutch Henry's restaurant were attacked and robbed shortly after midnight by a trio of bandits who escaped in a waiting car.

C. J. Fritz, 36, of 123 Ormsby avenue, night manager of the restaurant, and Louis Lorenz, 37, of 217 Stewart avenue, his assistant, were only a few steps away from the night repository of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, Fourth avenue and Wood street, when they were set upon by two armed men.

One of the bandits knocked Lorenz, who was carrying the funds, to the ground, the paper-wrapped money falling from his arms. Fritz, who endeavored to aid his companion, was slugged on the head with the butt of a revolver by one of his attackers while the other shoved a gun in Lorenz' ribs.

Seizing the receipts—consisting of bills and $50 in change—the holdup men jumped into a car, where a third bandit was at the wheel, Fritz and Lorenz told police.

Detective Capt. Howard Forner and City Detectives Thomas Morgan and Robert Marshall, after questioning the victims, had them attempt identification at Bertillon headquarters.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 20.—Edward Bremer, St. Paul bank president, kidnaped for $200,000 ransom, was killed accidentally by one of the gang of abductors, according to an anonymous letter received today by W. C. Robertson, postmaster of Minneapolis.

The letter to Robertson also declared that Bremer's body has been buried in the snow near Anoka, Minn., about 20 miles northwest of St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 20.—(AP.)—A fortune in old bills was ready for kidnapers today if they would heed the plea of an aged and ill father begging for the return of his wealthy son, Edward G. Bremer, held for $200,000 ransom.

Adolph Bremer, personal friend of President Roosevelt, as he paced the floor in the office of the Jacob Schmidt Brewing Company, of which he is principal owner, pleaded:

"Bring me back my boy—please—the money is waiting for you—but hurry—we want him back."

No contact had been made by the abductors, though the family was hopeful some sign would be made today telling them how and when to deliver the ransom in $5, $10 and $20 bills.

CHILD BACK IN SCHOOL

Far from the brewery property, 8-year-old Betty Bremer, daughter of the missing Commercial State Bank president and owner, yesterday returned to the exclusive Summit Girls' School for the first time since her father was abducted about 8:30 a. m. Wednesday.

Reliable sources close to the family said she had not been told her father had been kidnaped and threatened with death; nor that he might be seriously injured, or worse, following the finding of Bremer's automobile, the interior profusely blood-splotched, a few hours after he had left his daughter at the school Wednesday morning.

But her grandfather was acutely aware of his son's absence. The elder Bremer said:

"I wish they would bring him back. We want him back. We are willing to pay. We have been willing. From the start we followed instructions. Yet we hear nothing from the men who have him."

Federal investigators working on the case have met the same disappointment in their efforts to trace the abductors, though they received their first eye-witness explanation of the seizure from a milk wagon driver yesterday.

CAPTIVE MINE RULING STUDIED

United Mine Workers leaders and captive mine officials, particularly the H. C. Frick Coke Company, today were studying the decision handed down by the National Labor Board in Washington yesterday on captive mine dispute.

John L. Lewis, international president of the U. M. W. A., announced that his organization would "carry out the decision of the board." He withheld further comment until an official copy of the board's decision is received.

Spokesmen for the captive mine group here also declined to comment until the full text of the decision had been studied and it was not considered likely that an

ZOO OFFICIAL, FRIEND FINED

Arnold Schaumann, 33, keeper of the Highland Park Zoo, and his musician friend, Emil Bielo, 29, of 76 Roycroft avenue, Mt. Lebanon, arrested early today after they are alleged to have defied arrest by homicide detectives, were fined $5 on disorderly conduct charges by Magistrate Ralph E. Smith in Central Police Court.

Bielo, in a pensive mood, assured the court that he had a great respect for the law and explained that he and Schaumann were returning from a party at a local brewery when they had their brush with detectives.

Detectives Thomas Mulvihill and Michael Spudick testified that Schaumann showed a special officer's badge when the officers cautioned them against reckless driving in Grant street, and threatened to have the detectives fired if they arrested him. They declared he refused to show his automobile operator's card.

Schaumann denied that he was asked to show his operator's card. Both he and Bielo denied they were intoxicated.

Chief of Police Frank Tiffany, of Lake Forest, said it was his opinion Brundage had taken his own life.

Hints at Race With Death in Drive For Verdict

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—The fate of Dr. Alice Wynekoop, accused of slaying her young daughter-in-law, apparently hung in the balance today while the state made plans to insist that her trial for murder be finished regardless of her illness.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, in charge of the prosecution of the elderly defendant in the operating table death mystery, said:

"If we don't try her now, we won't be able to try her ever."

The prosecutor said that regardless of the findings of three physicians named by Judge Joseph B. David to examine Dr. Wynekoop, the state would oppose a defense motion to withdraw a juror and declare a mistrial. The court, however, said that the case would be halted if it can be shown that its continuation will endanger Dr. Wynekoop's life.

Two of the physicians, Dr. Arthur Byfield, named to represent the court, and Dr. William D. McNally, representing the state, agreed that Dr. Wynekoop is ill. Dr. Byfield said she was "not feigning illness," and described her as "a very sick woman."

The third physician, Dr. Frank Chauvet, appointed for the defense, declined to comment. All three are to make their formal reports to Judge David Monday.

Dr. Wynekoop's ailment was described by Dr. Francis McNamara as a very serious heart condition, complicated by hardening of the arteries.

The prosecutor, however, took the position that the very nature of her illness demanded that the case go to the jury.

100 Japanese Books Confiscated by U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—One hundred Japanese language books entitled "Our Navy" are being held by U. S. customs authorities here until a ruling from Washington is obtained upon their admissability, George A. Marshall, assistant collector of customs, said today.

Marshall said the books, among other things, contain illustrations depicting American and Japanese airplanes in combat.

Automobile men declare this years show will contain more new developments in engineering and design than any other show in the past decade. A large attendance has been predicted by W. N. Ownings, manager of the show.

The display was to open to the public at 1 p. m. It will be formally opened at 8 p. m. with ceremonies in which Mayor William McNair will participate.

Admission prices to the show have been substantially reduced, according to Owings. It will continue daily, except tomorrow, for a week.

Ex-Police Sergeant Held As 'Numbers Boss'

Thomas Oppenheim, former city detective and police sergeant, now rated by police as a 'big time" numbers racketeer, was held for court along with three of his alleged assistants in Morals Court today.

Oppenheim was charged with operating a lottery. Francis Desmond, of 4621 Forbes street; Dan Paulson, of 348 Atwood street, and Thelma Brown, of 4633 Winthrop street, all of whom testified they were employed by Oppenheim, were held as material witnesses.

Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd directed yesterday's raid on the Oppenheim headquarters, second floor of Weber's garage, 4616 Henry street.

Boyd produced as evidence three handbags filled with numbers slips, four adding machines and $87 in change, which he testified had been seized.

Oppenheim asked the privilege of concealing his right address to avoid embarrassment of his family. He is well known in sporting circles, police say. He served in the Police Bureau for years, according to Inspector Boyd.

Councilmen John M. Huston and Walter J. Gallagher were spectators at the hearing before Magistrate Ralph E. Smith.

Four men arrested in a raid at 1402 Clark street, which police said was a numbers headquarters, were fined by Magistrate Charles D. McCall in Center Avenue Police Court. Morris Levinson, 32 Reed street, was fined $25 or 10 days, and Herbert Angel, 5700 Munhall road; Meyer Siegal, 818 Crawford street, and Charles Johnson, 1209 Hazel street, $10 or 10 days each.

Japan Resents Article By Mussolini

TOKIO, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Koki Hirota, Japanese Foreign Minister, yesterday instructed Hajime Matsushima, ambassador to Italy, to call Premier Mussolini's attention to "the possible harmful effects to Italo-Japanese amity" of an article which appeared recently in some American publications.

The article by Premier Mussolini to which Foreign Minister Hirota apparently refers appeared in the New York American and other Hearst newspapers on Sunday, January 14. The Premier took as his text a speech delivered by Foreign Commissar Litvinoff, of Russia, which Mussolini described as war-like and directed against Germany and Japan as Russia's probable enemies.

Mussolini declared the Russian and Japanese armies were confronting each other on the Manchurian border and that the peril of war exists. He said the event involves China and the United States directly and England, France, Italy and Holland indirectly. He declared Japan's national philosophy made it impervious to international public opinion and added:

"There does not exist today a 'Yellow Peril' of a politico-military nature; what exists is a driving Japanese competition in all the markets of the world, Europe included.

"The 'Yellow Peril' will always be a fantasy on condition that the white West realize their political collaboration; on condition that 'mediation' be attempted, not in the vulgar sense of the word, between the two types of civilization."

CWA JOB RELIEF CURBED HERE AS FUNDS DWINDLE

REPLACEMENTS ONLY WORK OPEN NOW

Hope for U. S. Funds By February 10 to Continue Progam

Civil works activities in Allegheney County were curtailed today as federal funds for the program dwindled.

CWA officials hoped Congress would provide an additional appropriation to increase activities by February 10 and continue the job-giving program at least until May.

County Administrator James L. Stuart, was directed by State Administrator Eric H. Biddle to hire no more persons, except as replacements for those already at work.

The hours of work in communities of 2,500 or more population was reduced from 30 a week to 24. In smaller communities, 15 hours a week will be provided.

Hopkins Praises Stuart For CWA Efforts Here

By JOHN COWAN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan 20.—James L. Stuart, civil works chief in Allegheny County, was given a clean bill of health today by CWA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, after a scrutiny of complaints as to political corruption in Pennsylvania civil works activities.

State Administrator Eric H. Biddle will remain in office, having convinced Hopkins that he is making all possible headway in giving efficient service in the face of "hamstringing from more than one of the political factions," as Hopkins termed. Wire-pulling by the followers of Gov. Pinchot, William S. Vare and Joseph Guffey.

SCORES POLITICIANS

All this came about after Biddle had spent two days here in consultation with Hopkins, and they had canvassed the entire situation. Regarding Stuart, Hopkins said:

"Considering everything, Mr. Stuart has done a good job. Pittsburgh was slow in getting men started to work, but we know all about the conditions responsible for that. The union question will wash itself out. But these local administrators have gone ahead in spite of obstacles thrown in their way by politicians, and have shown a sincere effort to relieve unemployment."

UPHOLDS BIDDLE

As to the attack upon Biddle's administration, given in a statement here yesterday, Hopkins said:

"In my opinion Biddle has done his job, not only with integrity, but what is more important, with genuine sympathy for the unemployed. Relief activities increased under his administration in spite of political attacks. It is impossible for one in his situation not to make powerful political enemies.

"It is not my intention to let political influence interfere with relief work in Pennsylvania or anywhere else. I do not intend to be sidetracked in my job of administering relief by any work of political snipers."

JOHNSON STIRS SENATE WRATH

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—With resentment spreading in Congress over the scorching attack on Senators Borah, (Rep.), of Idaho, and Nye, (Rep.), of North Dakota, by Gen Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, in New York Thursday night, a Senate investigation of the NRA, and especially of Johnson's administration, loomed as a probability.

Both Borah and Nye have served emphatic notice that their fight against monopolies and trusts nurtured by the NRA had just begun. Their objective is the restoration to full effectiveness of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws' provisions against monopolies that they charge have been set aside through the modifying anti-trust clauses in the NRA Act.

It was significant that when Borah and Nye addressed the Senate yesterday, taking issue with Johnson, no Senator rose to defend the NRA administrator.

Johnson, in his New York speech, specifically singled out Borah and Nye in referring to NRA critics as professional politicians and tom-tom beaters.

FARLEY TO QUIT CHAIRMAN JOB

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—A surge of political party changes that may widely alter the national capital's accustomed lineup today gathered momentum in various quarters.

President Roosevelt, at the insistence of James A. Farley, is seeking a new chairman for the Democratic National Committee. No immediate shift appeared imminent, but Farley has indicated he would retire as party chairman when a successor is found in order to devote more time to his Postmaster Generalship.

On Capitol Hill, the President's denunciation of lobbying by national committeemen today had developed into a wave of political reform spirit that promised quick consideration of corrective legislation.

The Senate had before it a measure to prevent members of either national party committee from practicing before government departments. Other bills to carry the reform still further were under consideration.

SCHOOL BOARD THREATENED BY M'NAIR

Demands Body Join in Small Home Tax Exemption Plan

The Board of Public Education will go along with the new home tax-exemption plan proposed by William N. McNair, or there will be an elective school board, the Mayor has threatened.

The plan is to exempt from taxation for a period of five years a valuation up to $5,000 on new homes with the idea of encouraging building.

The Mayor revealed he expects this exemption to be extended to school taxes. As the alternative, he said:

"If they don't do it we will have an elective school board after the 1935 session of the Legislature. The land speculators out there have held up our program long enough."

The Mayor made several other threats of a startling nature. He threatened to start escheat proceedings against the Schenley Estate properties if those interests attempt to fight his 10 per cent ground rent tax proposals, and he renewed his threat of a drastic reduction for union labor in the budget.

He implied a dislike for the tax on meters of public utilities proposed to Council by Councilman John J. Kane, which previously was said to have McNair's support.

He raked organized labor, declaring its representatives showed lack of interest in the $5,000 home tax exemption plan. He included the employers, too, and said the Builders' Exchange should have been urging Council to pass the necessary legislation.

DRUGGISTS GET 'ALKY' WARNING

HARRISBURG, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Although the Attorney General ruled that druggists may sell alcohol, J. B. Pilchard, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association, has telegraphed warning to all members of the organization that sale of spirit involves risk.

Unless it is for medicinal or technical purposes, he said, the sale might bring embarrassment if the purchasers were arrested for violation of the state liquor law. Unlicensed persons are prohibited from blending liquors and the sale of alcohol for this purpose is banned.

Pilchard also pointed out that by pouring alcohol from one container into another druggists might be classed as "bootlers" and technically would be required to have a license as such. He therefore advocated that it be sold only in original containers.

Youth Runs Away From Blind School

Police were asked today to search for Michael Henchak, 16-year-old runaway from the Pennsylvania School for the Blind, who disappeared from the school dormitory in Bellefield avenue some time during last night.

Described as not being entirely blind, the youth came to the school here from his home in Portage about a week ago. School authorities said he was "homesick." He was described as being 5 feet 7 inches tall; weight, 140 pounds, and wearing a blue sweater and gray trousers.

VET AID BOOST MAY BALK WAR IN CONGRESS

Battle Lines Shift as Roosevelt Eases Economy Act

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt's sudden relaxation of the Economy Act to allow $21,092,205 more annually for veterans today shifted the Congressional battle lines for an impending fight on the perennial question.

Despite a feeling in informed quarters that the White House move might block further action along this line, quick steps were expected from both the Democratic and Republican sides. Polls disclosed that members of both parties previously had favored raising the veterans' ante.

Mr. Roosevelt in his executive order reminded that he had directed Gen. Hines, of the Veterans' Administration, to make a continuous study of the effect of the economy act regulations on veterans and that he had promised changes where the veterans' interests necessitated them.

MODIFICATIONS OUTLINED

Modifications ordered were summed up by the White House as:

"Liberalization of eligibility rules for hospital treatment in non-service connected cases so as to provide such treatment to veterans suffering with non-service diseases requiring emergency or extensive medical and surgical care, who are unable to pay for same.

"The granting of a pension of $15 per month to Spanish-American War veterans who served 90 days or more and were honorably discharged or who, having served less than 90 days, were discharged for disability incurred in line of duty in the service and who are 50 per cent or more disabled without regard to the service origin of the condition or the age of the veteran.

"Increase in burial and funeral allowance for deceased war veterans from $75 to $100.

"War veterans suffering with permanent and total disabilities not the result of their misconduct which are not shown to have been incurred in any period of military or naval service are no longer required to prove a minimum of 90 days' service providing they were discharged on account of disability incurred in line of duty in order to draw pension of $30 a month.

PROVISION FOR WIDOWS

"Restoration of previous rates of pension payable to certain widows of deceased Regular Army officers and enlisted men who died of disabilities incurred in line of duty, the maximum payable in such cases to be the $30 rate payable to widows of war veterans who died of service connected disabilities.

"Prohibition against payment of pension to federal employes receiving salaries in excess of $50 per month was modified to permit the payment of pensions to such employes if single whose salary does not exceed $1,000 per annum, or if married or supporting minor children does not exceed $2,500 per annum.

"Provision authorizing renouncement of pension which will permit trained employes of the Veterans' Administration who otherwise under the provisions of the Economy Act would be barred from participating in the making of decisions on veterans' claims to retain their positions."

TWO MEN DIE BY GUN, ROPE

The suicide of one man in a casket plant and that of another in his home, where a grandson stumbled upon the body in the dark, were reported to the Coroner today.

In the latter case, the Coroner was told, the grandson was frightened so badly, he fide from the house and did not report his discovery until daylight.

William T. Howe, 58, was found dead with a bullet hole in his head in his office at the National Casket Company plant at Chateau and Reedsdale streets, North Side. A revolver was found beside the body.

William H. Kiefer, son-in-law who lives with the Howe family at 17 Arion street, Mt. Washington, said he knew of no reason why Howe would commit suicide.

The body of Martin Secan, 70, was found hanging by a rope in the kitchen of his home at Sygan Hill, a mining town near Bridgeville, by his grandson, Martin Mandus, 22, the Coroner was told.

Mandus said he returned to his grandparents' home, where he had been visiting, at 1 a. m. He bumped against the body dangling from a rafter, ran out, and wandered about until 9 a. m., according to the morgue report. He then notified Justice of the Peace Dominick Mosti.

CONVICTS FREE CAR OWNER

BARTLESVILLE, Okla., Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Lewis Dresser, 26, Kansas school teacher, who was abducted by Jim Clark and another of the seven convicts who escaped the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing yesterday, was released unharmed near Pawhuska, Okla., at 5 a. m. today.

Dresser, seized soon after Clark, Bob (Big Boy) Brady and five other convicts, all of whom are still at large, fled over the wall of the Lansing prison, was freed after a wild 20-hour ride.

Dresser said that Clark, one of the 11 convicts who figured in the Memorial Day break last year from the Kansas prison, had driven the machine most of the way from Wallula, Kan., Dresser's home, where he was kidnaped as he departed from the rural school where he is teacher.

GROUPS STUDY 'CAPTIVE' PIT DECISION

Union Leaders Plan To Carry Out Ruling

While the decision specifically stated that recognition of the union as such was not a question before the board, and therefore "need not here be decided," the full text of the board's opinion was looked upon in United Mine Workers circles as a complete victory for the union.

Two questions were definitely decided by the board, which set forth in detailed language how in its opinion contracts should be worded.

One had to do with identification of the union officials selected as representatives of the miners and the other had to do with the "union check-off."

Both decisions were in the nature of compromise agreements between the U. M. W. and the operators and both specifically mentioned the Frick company as operator.

In lieu of the Frick company's proposed contract and the U.M.W. form which the Frick company turned down, the board stated the contract should be as follows:

"An election having been held on the 23d day of November, 1933, at Maxwell mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, and a majority of those voting thereat having chosen John L. Lewis, international president, United Mine Workers of America; Phillip Murray, international vice president, United Mine Workers of America; Thomas Kennedy, international secretary-treasurer, United Mine Workers of America; William Hynes, president, District No. 4, United Mine Workers of America; C. C. Boner, vice president, District No. 4, United Mine Workers of America, and John Kurtz, organizer, District No. 4, United Mine Workers of America, as their representatives for purposes of collective bargaining;

"Now, therefore, this agreement entered into this..... day of ..... 1934, between the said H. C. Frick Coke Company and John L. Lewis..... ..... et al (the contract repeating names and official titles of all the officers) ....., representing employes of aforesaid coal company who elected them as their representatives, and such other employes as may authorize them to represent them in negotiations with their employers, witnesseth, it is hereby agreed as follows:"

UNION DEMAND

The U. M. W. had proposed a contract which specifically made the union a party to the agreement. Objecting to this the Frick Company proposed a contract which recognized the union officers only as individuals.

The question of union recognition under the Labor Board's phraseology is one for legal determination elsewhere, according to the decision.

Wages and working conditions, not having been an issue at this time, according to the board decision, the only other point in dispute was the check-off.

The union's phraseology for this part of the contract was passed upon favorably by the board, which stated that in addition, the following proviso should be included for "clarification:"

"Provided, however, that nothing in foregoing shall be construed to deny to any employe not a member of the United Mine Workers of America the right to make voluntary assignment of wages for dues or payments to any organization of which he may be a member, or for any other purpose."

Both parties were virtually ordered to resume negotiations under terms of the decision and, "if no final agreement is reached within 15 days, either party may notify board to that effect and the board will then consider any controversial matters other than these disposed of herein."

It was not expected, however, that negotiations would get under way for at least a week, the international convention of the U. M. W., opening in Indianapolis next Tuesday, and all of the officers and district representatives planning to attend the sessions.

CWA BANS TAX COLLECTING

There won't be any CWA men knocking at your door and asking you please to pay your taxes.

A request for 50 men and an appropriation of $7,000 for canvassers, made when city employes resented McNair's plan to use them for the purpose, has been refused by the CWA as being of no permanent social or economic benefit.

The request was refused in a letter addressed to Director Leslie M. Johnston of the works department by CWA Administrator James L. Stuart.

That leaves McNair's original plan facing the city workers. They declare it would embarrass them to solicit delinquent taxes from their friends and neighbors.

McNair has repeated his promise of promotion and employment preference to employes aiding the collection, saying that if they wouldn't do it, he would find workers to take their places.

STRIKE AT NEW P. O. ENDED

Tentative settlement of the eight-month strike of structural ironworkers and a few other construction trades will put more than 400 men back to work on the new federal building Monday. This will mean an added payroll of about $90,000 a month, according to Maj. Robert Greenfield, United States engineer in charge.

Construction work on the building has been at practically a standstill for the past two months because of the strike, Maj. Greenfield said.

As a result, he said, completion of the building by March 1, as originally scheduled, will be impossible. Maj. Greenfield would not say when the building would be finished.

Dollar Rum 'Pure,' Chemists Declare

HARRISBURG, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Chemists find that the $1-a-fifth whisky which state liquor stores will begin selling Monday is "a potable spirituous liquor and is free from denaturants and of harmless character."

The product, which has a proof strength of 90.35 and 45 per cent of alcohol by volume, does not contain aged whisky, however.

Coyne Still Able to Get 'JC' Tag for Auto

State Senator James J. Coyne's political star may be fading, as his critics assert, but he still has enough influence to get one of the favored license plates for 1934.

The list of those whose auto plates consist of one or two of their own initials—favors granted by Gov. Pinchot's office—was made public today in Harrisburg.

The Senator drew JC, which is short enough to impress traffic policemen.

One Pittsburgher got a one-initial plate—Mary R. Shields, wife of Mark Shields, Sun-Telegraph writer on politics. The license is a lonesome S.

Those who drew two-initial plates include the late John W. Vickerman. Others:

A. S. Guggenheim, H. C. Milholland, Arthur M. Rosenbloom, Albert R. Lederer, Ben H. Giffen, J. B. Euwer, Caroline J. Hartwell, H. C. Rodgers, W. L. Trimble, Edgar K. Lowry, Edward P. Brown Produces Mail Data, Charges Plot

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Who's the "big bad wolf" that "planted" the missing air and ocean mail files in former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown's personal packing boxes?

This question was the topic of the hour in every official gathering here today from the congressional cloakrooms to the diplomatic tea tables as the capital remained agog over Brown's sensational appearance with the missing files, his charge that "character assassins" had planted them in his personal belongings, and his quick departure for New York.

Senator Hugo Black, Democratic chairman of the Senate Committee which is investigating the air and ocean mail contracts awarded under the Hoover administration, said:

"It would be interesting to know who could have 'surreptitiously' put those files in Gen. Brown's boxes.

The Alabama Senator suggested that, "after Gen. Brown's excellent example," perhaps some other missing files might be found in packing boxes.

Brown's return of the missing files came just one week after evidence had been presented before the Senate Committee that postoffice employes, at Brown's orders, had burned his office records in the Postoffice Department furnace a few days before Brown went out of office with the rest of the Republican administration on March 4.

RABBI SCORES COUGHLIN FOR BIRTH CONTROL FIGHT

RAPS MEDDLING WITH WOMEN'S PROBLEMS

'Mothers Alone Know Wisdom of Limiting Family,' Priest Told

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, whose ringing attacks on various public figures have won him a radio audience of millions, was under fire himself today.

Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein, chairman of the Social Justice Commission of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, in speaking before the annual convention of the American Birth Control League at the New York Y. W. C. A. last night, referred to a quoted statement of the Detroit priest on the subject of birth control, and declared:

"I resent the dictates of any man, no matter what church he belongs to, who thinks he can instruct women in their own field. It is not his business or the business of any one else. You alone know your strength and it is up to you to decide how many children you will have and how often they should come. I have enough confidence in the understanding, intuition and ethical spirit of womanhood to leave them to reach a wise decision in this respect.

"Father Coughlin seems to forget that it is obviously unwise for us to bring more mouths into the world until we have fed those we now have. Then we can see about feeding more.

"I don't see how Father Coughlin can advance a minimum wage and not limit the families of America as to the number of children a minimum wage will cover."

Rabbi Goldstein estimated that there are 40 to 50 million men and women in America who are living below the "level of decency."

He appealed for support for enactment of legislation legalizing dissemination of contraceptive information under scientific control.

TWO FACE COURT IN RELIEF RIOT

A 19-year-old boy was to get a hearing in Morals Court today for leading a crowd of 80 persons who, police said, stormed the North Side Emergency Relief headquarters yesterday at 521 Sandusky street.

He is Louis Bannish, of 1309 Bidwell street. His arrest followed that of James Konkelas, of 1106 Penn avenue, said also to have been a leader. Both were charged with disorderly conduct.

Konkelas was given a special hearing—contrary to custom—late yesterday before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones on order of Mayor William N. McNair, after members of the North Side Unemployed Council called on the Mayor.

Acting on the Mayor's advice, the committee went to Common Pleas Court to seek a habeas corpus writ. When that did not succeed he had the special hearing arranged.

Police Lieut. Harry Moore testified the outbreak at the relief headquarters began after representatives of the unemployed council had been admitted to confer with Mrs. Clara Woodruff, a supervisor for the relief board, regarding cases they charged had been neglected.

BEATEN, WEST SUSPECT SAYS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—In a guarded, rumor-filled courtroom, Edward Friedman told his story of being beaten by police into a confession, which he repudiated, of robbing Mae West of more than $20,000 in cash and jewels.

Rumors of possible violence, varying from threats against the judge and the actress to purported plans of attacking Friedman, marked his trial on a robbery charge.

Several defense witnesses testified they saw no bruises on Friedman's body the day before his arrest, and a day later he appeared to have been abused.

His testimony was taken yesterday after state witnesses had quoted him as saying he had made voluntary statements.

'All's Welles With Havana' Might Have Been Story Title

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Our little island neighbor is acting up like a continent.

We were hoping we could write a story book ending, "All's Welles with Havana."

Senor Mendieta is the fourth president in five months.

Four out of five doesn't balance. Maybe they skipped an administration.

It seems that our ambassadors ain't talking to the right bird down there. The strong silent man behind the megaphone is an army sergeant.

Japanese and Russian Differ on War With U. S.

RUDY ATTEMPTS TO BLOCK SUIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—The shoe is on the other foot in the scramble of Rudy Vallee and his wife, Fay Webb Vallee, for tactical advantage in their court battles.

The singing orchestra leader who recently defeated a move by his wife to restrain him from seeking a Mexican divorce, now seeks to prevent her from securing a California separation — with a goodly amount of cash.

Mrs. Vallee, on the other side of the continent, was also busy yesterday, gathering additional evidence she will present in seeking separate maintenance of $7,400 a month. She charged Rudy with misconduct with Alice Faye, blues singer with Vallee's orchestra, and others identified only as "Jane Does."

Her attorneys in Los Angeles announced that Johnson Hurd, former secretary to Vallee, would be one of the principal witnesses in support of her charges against the singer. Hurd arrived in Los Angeles by airplane yesterday.

Gen. Yakhontoff Says Empire Prepares For Conflict

The foreign policies of Russia and Japan were debated by Maj. Gen. Victor A. Yakhontoff, Russian historian, and Dr. Yutaka Minakuchi, Japanese author, at the Foreign Policy Association's dinner in the Hotel Schenley.

Dr. Minakuchi termed the possibility of Japan warring on the United States as "unthinkable" and averred his country's invasion of Manchuria was in self-defense.

Gen. Yakhontoff, however, in reply declared Japan's aim in continental Asia was to provide herself with raw materials for a conflict—possibly with the United States.

"All Russia wants in Manchuria is to prevent encroachments on her rights there; all that she wants in Mongolia is to see that the outer part of it remains autonomous, as a buffer state against Japan's invasion."

Dr. Minakuchi, accused Soviet Russia of converting Mongolia into a Soviet system of republics.

Hilltop Man Stabbed In Holdup Attempt

WAR PICTURES PRAISED BY M'SWAIN

Best Argument for Defense, Says Congressman

Death is the wages of war and the price to be paid by the nation that fails to maintain its defenses.

So said Congressman John J. MacSwain, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, in Pittsburgh today en route from Washington to Selfridge Field, Mich.

Of the World War pictures to be published weekly in the Sun-Telegraph, beginning tomorow, he said:

"In spite of their gruesomeness, such scenes will be only a May Day picnic compared with the slaughter in the next conflict.

"Revealing the horrors of the greatest tragedy of all time is an excellent idea, provided the public is impelled to avert another such catastrophe by building a wall of defense against it."

Anticipating a pacifistic reaction to the Sun-Telegraph photos because of their stark sordidness, MacSwain warned against it, saying:

"We can't shut our eyes to reality. It's far better to face the bitter facts of the past so we may avoid them in the future. But you can't get rid of war by passing an amendment against it, and the best guarantee of peace is a rockbound defense."

The Congressman from South Carolina asserted that a powerful air force is essential to the United States because of its immense territory. He said that common sense demands government planes number half those of all combined European countries.

The air service, he declared, should be a separate department of defense, distinct from the Army and Navy. The establishment of such a department, according to MacSwain, is inevitable.

Leaving Pittsburgh today, MacSwain is to fly to the Michigan Air Field, where he will review the 1st Pursuit Group of the Army Air Corps. Before returning to the capital he will inspect the government field at Dayton, O.

BULLITT SEES WAR THREAT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Recognizing the possibility of war in the Far East, William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to Russia, cites it as a reason why commercial relations should be resumed with a reciprocal exchange of goods instead of "credits in excessively large amounts." In an address last night he said:

"A nation may have every intention of paying its bills and may have ample resources, but if it is attacked it must turn every energy to the prosecution of the war and in most cases delay its normal payments."

He told 600 persons at a Chamber of Commerce dinner:

"The Soviet government today desires peace with the deepest sincerity."

It was the first public pronouncement on Russo-American affairs by the first ambassador from Washington to Moscow in 15 years.

MENDIETA BUSY WITH CABINET

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—President Carlos Mendieta worked hard today to round out a strong government upon which to base his bid for Cuban recognition by the United States.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull's statement at Key West, Fla., yesterday, that prospects are bright for recognition raised hopes of its early attainment.

In an effort to consolidate the support of all political factions, Mendieta had promised the Labor portfolio to the ABC, Public Works to the Menocalist group and Agriculture or Communications to the OCRR.

$12,500 Award for Injuries on Trolley

Sophia Steuernagle, 1512 Federal street, yesterday was awarded $10,000 and her husband, Julius Steuernagle, $2,500 damages from the Pittsburgh Railways Company by a Common Pleas jury, in a suit for injuries suffered by Mrs. Steuernagle when a street car in which she was riding collided with an automobile at Ellsworth and South Highland avenues.

The estate of Wallace H. Johnston, driver of the automobile, was a defendant, but the jury ruled Johnston was not negligent.

Resisting efforts of two holdup men to steal her purse while she was walking near North Dithrich street and Center avenue last night, Mrs. Amy Wilson, Royal York Apartments, was dragged into the middle of the street before surrendering the bag, containing 50 cents and valuable papers.

Mrs. Wilson, an insurance agent in the Oliver Building, said two men jumped from an automobile and struck her on the head when she held tightly to her purse.

TRAINS HIT CAR, MAN KILLED

One man is dead today and another is recovering in his home from injuries suffered when their automobile was struck by a Baltimore and Ohio freight train and thrown against the side of a passenger train bound in the opposite direction at the Third street crossing, Braddock, last night.

The driver of the automobile, Elmer S. Burkman, 30, of 2108 Delaware avenue, Swissvale, was pronounced dead on arrival at the Braddock General Hospital. The owner of the car, Walter C. Anderson, of 336 Amber street, East Liberty, was treated at the hospital for a fractured hand.

War's Ghastly Toll Bared By Head of 91st Division Vets In Plea for Preparedness

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20.—In vivid sentences that painted a convincing, realistic word picture, Guernsey Frazer, national president of 91st Division Association, laid bare many of the horrors of war in an address over KFWB.

Out of that kaleidoscopic nightmare of fast-moving events on the battle front, in which he participated, Frazer selected one typical episode and climaxed his speech with an earnest plea for American preparedness as the surest guaranty of peace.

He appealed to the nation to arm and equip its Navy and Army so that other powers will respect the United States. And he called attention to the announcement that next Sunday the Hearst newspapers will publish five complete pages of UNCENSORED war pictures as offering cogent and visible reason for preparedness. The pictures will be the first of a series which are to appear on following Sundays.

Frazer told the story of Audernard, Belgium, caught in the clash between American and French troops on one side and the German, Austrian and Hungarian forces on the other. He told of the ghastly suffering of the noncombatants as well as of the fighting men.

Of the fight for the final bridge-head, he said:

"Around the corner rolls a whippet tank, across the bridge, over the sand bags, across the dead and the wounded and the living, until there is nothing but a sodden mass of crushed flesh.

"The next day huddled in basements, gassed, lying on streets you find old men, women and children. Even the churches are filled with cold, stiff peasants.

"The next war the noncombatants will suffer as in no other war. Picture Los Angeles or Pittsburgh with water, gas, sewage, lights, roads and highways out of service!

"How long could it exist without them? Add a few droning planes overhead, dropping mobs, and you can draw your own conclusions of what would happen.

"No one wants another war, but unpreparedness invites war. There is but one thing for this nation to do, to so arm and equip its Army and Navy that every nation will respect us; so that no nation would consider waging war on us. The next war in which we are involved will not be fought in Europe; it will be because an enemy has tried to invade our shores."

The speaker prefaced his remarks by saying that no one who had participated in an actual war wanted to see another.

'Wonder Child' Angers Orchestra Maestro

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—The Call-Bulletin quotes Bernardino Molinari, Italian orchestra conductor, as describing the performance of Ruth Slenczynski, 9-year-old pianist, at a benefit concert here Thursday night as the "most confounded impertinence I ever heard of."

The newspaper said Molinari's patience broke when the young prodigy, after playing the Beethoven concerto with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra which he was conducting, added a cadenza of her own and then played a succession of encores.

The noted conductor was quoted as declaring:

"The audience is being worn out. Can't someone pry her loose from that stool. It's an insult to the orchestra. Wonder child! And how! It's an endurance test, not a concert!"

CLERGY DIFFER ON TEST FOR PASTORS

Diferences on whether prospective ministers should be asked specifically to state their belief in the Trinity had arisen today in the plan for merger of the Presbyterian and United Presbyterian churches.

General assemblies of the United Presbyterian Church in 1932 and 1933 instructed its merger committee to have added to the formula of subscription for all ministers admitted to the church the following question:

"Do you believe in the triune God, the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit as set forth in the confessional statement in articles 11, 12 and 13."

TEST TO LIBERALISM

The apparent purpose was to test liberalism of candidates.

The joint committee on Organic Union did not adopt the proposal, according to articles appearing in the United Presbyterian by the Rev. John McNaugher, president of the Pittsburgh-Xenia Theological Seminary and the Rev. Dr. C. J. Williamson, a member of the seminary faculty, both members of the joint committee.

In explanation, Dr. McNaugher said:

"We felt that the doctrine of the Trinity was fully covered by assent to the Westminster confession, the larger and shorter catechisms. One who assents to these is bound to accept the doctrine of the Trinity if he is honest in his statement. There is no verbal barrier to dishonesty."

PLEDGE HELD SUFFICIENT

The Rev. Dr. W. J. Reid, of the First United Presbyterian Church, and chairman of the joint committee, said:

"The members of the committee were unanimous in desiring that the ministry of the United Church should be unquestionably loyal to the doctrines of the Word of God and of the Westminster standards. It is the conviction of all the members of the committee that the formula of questions assures such a pledge of loyalty and that the addition of other questions specifying particular doctrines would not make the pledge any stronger than it is."

FAVORS SPECIFIC QUESTION

Comments of other ministers on the committee's action:

The Rev. Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan, of the Shadyside United Presbyterion Church.

"The committee has ignored the instruction of two general assemblies of the United Presbyterian Church. A candidate for the ministry as it now stands will be required to subscribe to a 'system of doctrine' as contained in the Westminster confession and the catechisms. One might give assent to a system of doctrine without agreeing to the details of that system. In my opinion the specific question as to belief in the Trinity should be asked. It involves the virgin birth and the deity of Christ."

"UNNECESSARY NOW"

The Rev. Dr. Clarence E. Macartney, of the First Presbyterian Church and former moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly:

"All candidates for the Presbyterian ministry solemnly confess their faith in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the Word of God, and also declare that they accept the Westminster standards as containing the system of doctrine taught in the Scriptures.

Since the doctrine of the Trinity is specifically taught in the Westminster standards, and is a doctrine derived from the Holy Scriptures, any honest man who takes the ordination vows of a Presbyterian minister, subscribes to the doctrine of the Trinity.

"Therefore, I do not see why a question as to the Trinity should be added to the ordination requirements. However, the day may come when, in order to guard against the invasion of unbelief in Christian pulpits, it will be necessary to have candidates for ordination subscribe not merely to a system of doctrine, but to specific Christian doctrine; such as the Trinity, the Incarnation, the Atonement, the Resurrection and the Second Advent."

HELD RESTATEMENT

The Rev. Dr. E. C. McCown, of Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church, and member of Joint Committee:

"I was convinced that inclusion of a question as to belief in the Trinity would be a restatement of the ground covered by the confession and catechisms and therefore unnecessary."

The Rev. Dr. S. A. Foster, North United Presbyterian Church:

"There is no question in my mind that anyone subscribing to the Westminster confession and the catechisms thereby gives assent to the doctrine of the Trinity."

CHANGE IN CONFESSION

One of the changes in the confession of faith as heretofore used by the United Presbyterian Church as explained by Dr. McNaugher is elimination of reference to the Pope as the "anti-Christ." He said:

"Few of us would now subscribe to the declaration that the Pope is the anti-Christ."

The substitute statement in the confession reads:

"The Lord Jesus Christ is the only head of the church, and the claim of any man to be the vicar of Christ and the head of the church is unscriptural, without warrant in fact, and is a usurpation dishonoring to the Lord Jesus Christ."

Assemblies of the two churches this year will vote on merger, the united church, if authorized, to be known as the Presbyterian Church of America.

The Story of David -:- CHAPTER XII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

And David learned that the Philistines were pillaging the city of Keilah, and after communing with God he set forth with his small army and saved the city and took shelter there. But the Lord told David that Saul would come down, and the men of Keilah would deliver him up. So David went forth and abode in a mountain in the wilderness of Ziph. And Saul sought to find David, but God delivered him not into his hand.

And Jonathan, Saul's son, went to David in the wood and spoke to him there and said: "Fear not, for the hand of Saul my father shall not find thee; and thou shalt be king over Israel, and I shall be next unto thee."

While Saul was seeking David in the Wilderness, he entered a cave where David was, and his men said to David, "Behold the day of which the Lord said unto thee: I will deliver thine enemy into thine hand."

YOUTH WILL BE ANSWERED

Young people are to have something to say about what sermons shall be preached from their church pulpit at the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, Fifth and Bellefield avenues.

The Rev. C. Marshall Muir recently held a meeting with his young people and they worked out a series of sermons which will begin tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. In his sermons he will answer such questions as "Is There a God?"; "Is There a Conflict Between Science and Religion," "How Can We Attain Mental Health?", "Why Have Denominations?", "Do We Have to Take Christianity?" and "Would Jesus Recognize Present Day Christianity?"

"Twentieth Century Conflicts" will be the general theme of the series. In commenting on the co-operation of the younger members of the congregation, the Rev. Muir said:

"These young people are living at the cutting edge in morals and religion today. They know what people want to hear from the pulpits. They know what questions a minister should answer from the pulpit."

La Scala Opera Broadcast Heard Here

By AIRCASTER

The cigaret program now featuring the Glen Gray Orchestra and Irene Taylor, via CBS-WJAS, will change its set-up within a week by dropping the Do-Re-Mi Sisters, and introducing two guest stars at each broadcast.

A master of ceremonies will be added and the Casa Loma Band and Miss Taylor will remain permanently with the show.

Frank Black and his orchestra drop out of the Troubadours show on the NBC-WCAE waves after the January 31 broadcast, and Lennie Hayton most likely will take over the musical end of the broadcast.

Milan's opera house, La Scala, will go on the American air for the first time, via CBS-WJAS, next Thursday at 3 p. m., presenting an hour of Donizetti's "La Favorita," thus adding to the high brow trend of American raddio.

News of the destruction by fire of the Granada, Chicago's famous night spot, brought grief to Paul Whiteman, Mildred Bailey, and many other radio celebrities who got their real start there.

It was there that Guy Lombardo, Ted Weems, and many others first achieved fame.

Short while ago I mentioned a learned gentleman at Tech as "Mr. Radio."

He objects—

Dear Aircaster:

After spending the last 20 years in attempt to explain to Pittsburghers how to pronounce my name, I was shocked and saddened to discover that I have neglected an important person—yourself.

The first syllable of the name Radio is pronounced red, in other words, like the past tense of the verb "to read."

Imagine, if you can, my sense of frustration after having labored through those old-fashioned person-to-person contacts to set folk aright on this point, to have you thus unwittingly combat me with the latest contraptions of the machine age. With no good wishes.

Very truly yours,
W. A. READIO,
Chairman Department of Painting and Design.

Well!—I'm glad I didn't call him "Raddio!"

Globe-Trotting

By Louis L. Kaufmann

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Mrs. C. L.—The Old Age Pension Bill signed by the Governor is for the relief of persons 70 or over who have no one to support them. Payments are scheduled to begin December 1. I'll invite the proper authority to explain it on the radio as soon as I find out who he will be.

Van H. Eshelman forgets his poetry for a moment to join the Numismatics with a question about the Flying Eagle cent. No, Van, because the 1856 Flying Eaglet is worth $18 doesn't make the 1858 one worth that much. It isn't the eagle that makes it expensive. It's the date. There are lots of 1858's.

Tax paying globe trotters—Councilman Kane meant that a tax would be placed on meters. It would be borne in the first instance at least by the utility companies, according to the Councilman's plan.

* * *

Globe Trotter T. Crownen suggests that City Council place subpatrolmen who need work at corners near schools to protect more adequately the children going to and from the school house.

* * *

M. G., Emerson street—The widow, not remarried, of a veteran is entitled to some compensation from the state. I'll ask your question to Lieut. Griffith, in charge of compensation work for this area, when he broadcasts with the Globe Trotter Saturday night at 6:30.

* * *

Daveline Fox—Bing Crosby must have several contracts. I don't know of any one expiring in January.

'Front Page Drama' On Air Tonight

JUNIOR PATROL

A sponsor is some older fellow or girl, maybe your captain's mother and father, or your Sunday school teacher or school teacher, who will help you run your Junior Patrol Club in the very best way.

One of the very best clubs in the Junior Patrol is the New Deal Club, of Laurel Gardens, Pa. Mrs. Marie C. Forsythe is the sponsor and today she writes this wonderful letter. Please read it all, fellows:

"I thought maybe you would like to know about the progress the club is making. We have started the boy's workshop I spoke of in a previous letter. A man has charge of the boys once a week when the workshop is in progress. Door stops and tooth brush holders are cut with jig saws, and these are to be painted and decorated and then sold.

"The proceeds of this work will be used for the work shop. If the boys can make out all right we would like to use some of the money for bringing cheer to others. We have three new members since our secretary, E. Snyder, wrote to you.

"Mr. Hall, I wish you could see the way our committees work. New committees are appointed for each new enterprise. We want all members to serve on the committees as often as possible. A successful club keeps its members interested and busy, both the same.

"The last meeting of our club this week was the end of the first six months of its being. The club ruled some time ago that all members with six months of perfect attendance would receive some special gift from the club, and also have his or her name on the honor roll with a gold star. Each additional six months of perfect attendance rates another gold star. Our members are working for a place on our honor roll.

"Our club lives up to its by-laws and the club members are keeping the Junior Patrol pledge individually, too."

That gives you some ideas, doesn't it, fellows? It shows you what a club with energy and direction can do!

We think that Mrs. Forsythe is doing a wonderful work—and the other friends she tells us of have helped the club so much.

Your club, captains, should have things to do every meeting. And most of your members should attend every meeting. Best of all, every member of a club should have something helpful to do. You see, too, don't you, that a big club has lots of fun? That's why we hope that every captain will keep on getting new members.

And remember, when you have a party for your members you are doing good, too.

'Different' Specialties Among Today's Prize Winners

Spring hats are on feminine heads again, so why not an occasional spring dish on the table is Prudence Penny's suggestion to cooking-minded housewives, today. Not that any dish is exclusively for spring serving. Rather some dishes seem to possess the appearance exactly suited to the budding time of the year.

Doesn't Rice Delight, the $5 winner, sound particularly different? Served in tall sherbet glasses it will provide a much to be desired color note on the table. Another different specialty you'll want to serve, are the sweet doughnut freaks which may be made quite simply in a number of attractive forms.

Whatever your ideas on cooking matters, send them in to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Judges go over the recipes received and daily award one $5 prize and ten $1 prizes to those they consider best. No recipes will be returned.

One-fourth cup milk (if large eggs use less milk).
Grated rind of one lemon.

Sift flour, measure, add sale and baking powder and sift again. Rub in butter, add sugar. Beat yolks until light, add to flour and sugar. Beat egg whites until they stand in peaks, add to mixture and add lemon rind, grated. Add milk and toss together with your hands and do not knead. Roll out on floured board very thin as for noodles. For "freaks" cut in lengths five or six inches long and three inches wide. Cut lengthwise through center three or four times. Tangle before dropping in hot fat. Fry like doughnuts. Cover with powdered sugar. For "water lilies" cut in circles five and one-half inches in diameter. Top of butter dish may be used to cut circle. Make cuts, one inch apart, towards center. Take one cut circle of dough and wet center with egg white. Place second circle on top of it. Press centers. Fry in deep, hot fat, pressing center down with wooden spoon or clean clothespin. Sprinkle with powdered sugar. Put in yellow center of jelly or fruit. For "rosettes" fix as for lilies, making slits one-half inch apart. Size of circle may be varied.

MRS. RALPH KUHNS,
Broadway, Pitcairn.
SWEETS AND LIMAS

One quart fresh lima beans.
Three medium sized sweet potatoes.
One-half cup milk.
Butter size of large walnut.

Pare sweet potatoes and cut them into pieces the size of the lima beans or in small squares. Cook in small amount of salted water. When tender add milk and butter. Add cooked limas and let simmer until potatoes and beans are well cooked and their flavors intermingled. If dried lima beans are used, cook until almost done before adding diced sweet potatoes.

MRS. W. J. WERLE,
807 Doolittle Street, Carnegie.
MUSHROOM STEAK

Two and one-half pounds top round steak.
A large piece of suet.
One-half cup flour.
One and one-half teaspoons salt.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.
One onion, minced fine.
One-half pound sliced mushrooms.
One tablespoon butter (heaping).

Have the butcher cut the top round at least one inch thick. Also request him to pound the meat with the back of his cleaver, first one way and then the other, leaving little squares on the surface. This aids in absorption of the flour. Wipe the meat with a clean damp cloth. Mix the flour, pepper and salt and rub as much as possible into all parts of the meat. Mince the suet and fry in a heavy frying pan but do not burn the fat. Sear the heavily floured meat on both sides, then fry to a rich brown. Place the meat in a casserole. Next saute the minced onion in the fat and pour over the meat; add about two and one-half cups of hot water. Cover and simmer until the meat is deliciously tender (about two hours). Shortly before serving time wash and slice the mushroom caps and stems. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the mushroom slices. Saute over a gentle heat about 10 minutes, stirring often. Remove meat to heated platter. Add mushrooms and any broth after sauteing, to the meat sauce heating thoroughly. Pour over top of steak. Garnish with cress. Serves six to eight.

One-half cup shortening.
One cup sugar.
One tablespoon grated orange rind.
Two eggs.

Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Drop by spoonfuls onto a greased baking sheet. Leave an inch between to allow for spreading. Bake in a moderately hot oven until delicately browned. Makes about three dozen cookies. If a crisper, richer cookie, more like a sandtart is desired, use only two cups of flour to the same amount of other ingredients.

Lecturer Tells Friday Club Members How to Understand Selves

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

To be an integrated personality you must put yourself into whatever you do; you must face realities and meet their challenge; you must have self confidence, self-respect and tolerance, a reasonable degree of independence of thought and action, an objective attitude and a wide range of resources for satisfying the emotional life. This was the summing up of the fine, rapid-fire talk on "Understanding Ourselves and Others" given yesterday before the Friday Morning Club by Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott. And there was an amplifier, and praise be! she could be heard.

To the student of psychology there wasn't anything particularly new in Mrs. Abbott's talk, but it was presented in such a refreshing manner that it drove home many truths which even the keenest of students may forget occasionally. It was illustrated with a number of apt, and some amusing anecdotes and personal incidents come upon in the speaker's work as clinical psychologist at the Judge Baker Foundation in Boston.

Mrs. Abbott spoke of the importance of the feeling of adequacy in each person's concept of himself, and said that the habit of "talking oneself down" is destructive. There is no greater aid in the solution of a problem than having somebody to "talk it out with," she observed.

She warned against being over solicitous of a child in conditioning it for life and also of the injustice of expecting a child to live up to family traditions and family ego imposed upon parents by their parents, expectations which force a child into conditions unsuited to him. And she particularly stressed the value of well administered praise.

FLEECY RESORT COSTUMES

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE SUN IS so alluring to city dwellers that plenty of out-door clothes, for swimming, bird railing at the races, and just tea-ing or lunching to the music of the waves before cabana or patio are the prime requisite of the traveler toward the South.

There can be very bracing days down there, when a really warm (though light) ensemble is worth the price of a dozen chiffons, if you don't happen to have one in the wardrobe. And when the trade wind springs up just before swift sundown, it is good to have a handy wrap even after a good hot day, very often.

Knitted frocks of silk and woollen yarn, velveteen, light homespun, suede, Challis and Shantung silk are all good materials to choose for the cozier items in your resort wardrobe.

The coat above is a soft angora white model in a tweedy weave and cut. It has raglan sleeves, and one button only, beneath the collar bow at the right, so that it falls in one loose graceful line to the three-quarter hem.

Gossipy Chat

There's not a Democrat, I believe, working on the Presidential ball! All of the women, at least, are Republicans. They think it's a grand joke themselves.

And they are working as hard for the ball as if Mr. Roosevelt were a Republican. A lot of them voted for him, for that matter.

The ball's a benefit for the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, established to aid infantile paralysis victims. Women of leisure are always ready to work for such a fine purpose.

The town's still talking about the little flower girl and page boy at the McKay-Wyckoff wedding. They stood in the receiving line just like the grown-up members of the bridal party at the reception, and the little girl curtsied and the small boy shook hands.

The dainty little flower girl was Joan McKay, daughter of the James McKays, and the page boy, Benny McAlpin II, son of the junior Benjamin McAlpins, of Greenwich. His mother is the former Alberta McKay.

MUSIC

MARIE AND SERGEI RADAMSKY

The "Icor" Society presented Marie and Sergei Radamsky in Carnegie Lecture Hall last night. This song recital should have been heard by every musician eager to learn what is happening musically in Russia today, truly a revelation when brought to us with such authoritative singing.

Mr. Lissfelt

Both singers are gifted in voice and musical talent. Madame Radamsky's soprano is bright and lyric; Radamsky's is a vibrant and virile tenor. They have both acquired a good production, are skilled in musical nuance, and better still, unusually keen in their observation of nationalistic types which they interpret with greatest sincerity and sympathy.

Consequently their offerings from Italian opera appealed to me not at all in the same light as the songs which they have found among the folk of many lands and particularly among the proletariat of the new Russia.

A Turkish serenade sung by Madame Radamsky was found in its original in the oil fields near Baku. Its monotonous Oriental rhythm and organ point is ravishing in its simple beauty. A song of a peasant and priest with the woman's new sophistication anent the powers of the saints is highly comic and revelatory of the new regime.

Among Radamsky's fine offerings was a moving song of the "26," the commissars shot down by the White Guard. How races are being absorbed into the main stream is obvious in the song of a Jewish worker now at his factory wheel and happy in the new life, forgetful of the ancient laments of his forefathers.

The music of these new songs has a compelling simplicity that it may impress the new converts to such culture. Only in the texts do we find the spirit of the revolution, for this movement seems to have touched but slightly the fundamental principles upon which we base good music. We could invite these two artists again to Pittsburgh with considerable gain to our musical outlook.

Virginia Cunningham played accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Many Parents Aren't Honest With Their Children

Listen, Mom and Dad—this is for you?

Do you remember when you were 16 and boy (or girl) crazy?

Or the time you stole old Hi Brown's watermelons—or sneaked out the back door to go to Carrie Jones' party—or busted the schoolhouse window—or drove the old gray mare into a lather?

Of course you do! And I'm the gal who knows it. For I was a youngster when you were youngsters, too, Mom and Dad, and never a skit of those skittish days have I forgotten. And now I'm a mother—not only to my own dear lad, who'll not be needing me any more, but to all these bewildered young things who look to us oldsters for advice and comfort.

And what am I telling them?

I'm telling them that I was a regular egg.

I'm telling them that I wanted to raise Cain just as they want to raise Cain now—and did my humble best to achieve that ambition!

I'm telling them I didn't have much use for law or much respect for age, and that I can understand perfectly why they haven't much either.

LAW AND ORDER

And then, out of the laughter and love which springs up between us because of this honesty, I'm trying to make them see that Law and Order are worth while, and that they've a bigger job on their hands than we had on ours at their age. For it's up to them to build up a new, clean, brave world, in place of that one which we messed up so badly.

That's what I'm telling the youngsters today, Mom and Dad. That's how I'm trying to work with youngsters, win their love and co-operation.

But what are you doing? What are you telling that boy and girl of yours?

I know what thousands of you are doing. You're putting over a magnificent job. You're being real comrades and partners to your growing children, and they are going to worship and cherish you until the day they die. You're fine, you fathers and mothers who are being honest and fair with your boys and girls—and the world can never honor you enough.

But how about you other fathers and mothers, who line up along with Lucy's Mom and Dad? Just where do you rate and what do you think you're accomplishing? Listen:

PARENTS COMPLAIN

Dear Elsie—

Why on earth do my folks nag me so? I know I make mistakes, but good gosh! I'll bet they did, too, when they were 16 going on 17. But of course they wouldn't admit such a thing to me.

According to the impression they try to give me, they were always earnest and sensible, and thought out everything they did very carefully, even when they were babies, while young folks now are irresponsible and never think at all.

Well, maybe that was so, but it just doesn't sound reasonable. My brother (he's 18) and I both get this day in and day out. I have been in Hi for a year, and lots of boys like me and want to walk home with me.

I don't dare tell my mother there is one that I like. She would have a fit. She is always lecturing me about being Boy-Crazy, and about how "girls never dreamed of such things when I was your age." I hate to say so, but I don't believe it. She must have forgotten. Or is there some other reason for her to talk that way?

And Dad is just as bad. He isn't a solemn sort of person at all. He is full of fun. But he can't seem to remember any time when he wasn't serious as an owl at my brother's age. Not long ago Tommy and a bunch of boys went fishing, and they got to whooping it up, and swiped some apples from a farmer. This farmer got mad and chased them, and they managed to run the old rattle-trap car they had into a bank.

And you should have heard Dad rave. "I never in the world could have got into such a scrape!" is what he tells Tommy. "I had some sense of responsibility. I looked where I was going. It never occurred to me to do such things."

Do you think that is true? Do you think young people weren't kids when Dad and Mom were young? And if they were, why are they handing us a line like that now?

Tommy and I both think about things quite a lot, too, but we do make mistakes, I'll admit. Didn't youngsters make them 20 years ago, too? Weren't they tempted to whoop it up, sometimes? If so, why won't they admit it? LUCY.

GENUINE ANXIETY

There are plenty of reasons why they won't admit it, Lucy. Some of them not so good! But let's give parents the benefit of all doubts. Probably the main reason why they won't admit they are regular humans is because they honestly believe that, if they do, they'll lose their "hold over you."

Of course they're kidding themselves. By their fibbing and lack of understanding they've put themselves on the spot where they have no "hold" to lose. But there's genuine anxiety, genuine desire to guide you wisely through troubled times behind their dumbness. Try to believe that, little girl.

And now, Mom and Dad, I'm handing it on to you.

The kids are asking you for an answer—and you'd better make it good!

Or maybe here's a better plan. How about not trying to retain that "honor your parents" attitude which you never did achieve anyway, but just acknowledging that the kids have your number and then cutting out the bluff and loving each other regardless?

Wouldn't that be a better Family Code than the most snooty discipline?

'THREAT FROM FASHION'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Hats come and go, velvety, satiny, rabbity felt, and at last even in a snowstorm while King Winter sits in fragile spring's lap, glisteny straw; and it seems to me, as I cast my eye up at the feminine heads, that they are passing by with a noticeable repetition of FEATHERS by way of decoration. Cocky little feathers! They stand up alongside the high side of the Scotch tam of wool. They are tucked at the back. They lay flat like arrows.

I think Dan must have seen feathers, too. Last time I saw him he was fingering his wing-tips and eyeing a girl with a feather in her hat. He was saying "where did you get that feather?" And she was answering not at all, but her eyes were bright and had the look of a hunter in a fever.

"Look out, my lowly brothers of the woods and fields and all my minions of the temple of Love!" says he. "Jill is wearing feathers. LITTLE neat feathers. It may die out; the thrill of it, for her. And again it may run fashion-wild. So we had better take to the deeps of the runaway places 'til all blows over."

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Sweetheart of Sigma Sigh

Is it proper to wear a fraternity pin (given as an engagement pin) on a formal evening gown? K.

This kind of pin isn't appropriate to wear on a formal evening gown.

Arms and the Man

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Should a gentleman take a lady by the elbow and assist her in crossing the street and up the curb? My friend insists this is incorrect and I am supposed to take his arm when crossing the street.

This has become a heated argument, and we would be pleased to have your opinion. T.

Either is correct. The man may offer the woman his arm when he is assisting her in crossing the street. Or, as is more usual, the man may put his hand under the woman's elbow as they cross the street. The thing that mustn't be done is for the man to take the woman's arm.

Family Ties

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I shall be 15 years old next month. When I was born my mother died and a year later my father married again. I have two great aunts on my mother's side, whom I have never seen. My father has often spoken of them. I should like very much to know them. I have thought of having a photograph of myself taken and sending it to them, with a letter.

I do not know just what I wish to say in the letter. You see, there has been no communication with them for 14 years. Please tell me what I should say in the letter, and whether I should send the photograph? What should I say in the letter regarding the photograph? E.

What a happy plan you have in mind . . . by all means carry out this idea, and I am sure that you will give special joy to these two great aunts. Your letter to them accompanying the photograph, might read something like this:

Dear Aunt Mary

and Aunt Martha:

All my life my father has told me of you, and so charmingly that I have always dreamed of knowing you. The other day I decided that I would write to you, and that I would have a photograph taken to send you. Do you mind if I do this? Sometime I hope that I shall be given the lovely opportunity of knowing you and of hearing from you about my mother, who loved you both so much. In the meantime perhaps this photograph may serve as an "introduction."

I'm now fifteen years old, and am in high school. Maybe if you accept this introduction-by-photograph you will be willing to write me about yourselves and of your lives in these years since my mother died, and maybe, too, you would let me tell you more about my simple life in those years. Will you?

In the meantime, with this photograph, come my dearest wishes to you and the high-hearted looking forward to having you let me step into your lives and give you the love I want so much to give you.

Affectionately your niece,

Madge Awaits Return of Noel With Poems

Was Avis Arlen telling the truth when she said that she was getting sleepy and would be ready to go to bed "like a nice little girl" when the hour of dancing was up? Did she realize that she was decisively balked in her scheme of trying to ruin the bridesmaids's gown I had bought for her to wear in Mary's wedding procession, and had she decided to yield to circumstances stronger than her determined effrontery?

Or—and this seemed more like her—was she even now planning something more subtle, more evil, than the sabotage of a gown?

I confessed myself baffled, but I am sure nothing of my feeling showed in the playful smile I gave her.

"I was sure you had not reckoned upon the sleep-compelling power of our country air," I said banally, and she smiled back at me.

"It surely is powerful," she said. Then she followed me down to the second floor, where I again settled down into my arm chair by the reading table.

"Aren't you coming down to watch the dancing?" she asked, with apparent casualness, as she paused by my side.

Again I felt the tingle of the chase. She wanted to get out of that upper hall, away from my vantage point, where I could command a view of every door opening into the corridor.

"You are a rash girl to ask that," I told her, smiling, then covering a yawn. "I probably should make for the nearest chair, fall into the lap of the occupant and go to sleep. Can you imagine a more effective damper upon a gay party?"

OFFERS EXCUSE

"No, I can't," she answered, laughing. "But why don't you go to bed, instead of sitting out here? If you're afraid we won't go to bed promptly, I'll give you my word that I'll herd them all upstairs on the second you mentioned."

"You wouldn't have to do that," I said quickly, in militant defense of our young people. "Mary and Marion will see that the party closes on the dot. But I am too nervous to sleep until I am sure that you all are safely tucked in. So I shall doze quite comfortably here over my magazine until you all come upstairs.

She flashed a quick, inscrutable look at me, then, with a little wave of the hand and a laughing, burlesqued toast, "Good napping!" she went down the stairs, leaving me to wonder what would be the next trick in her evidently large bag of them.

Whatever was in her mind, however, she kept well concealed when she came upstairs at the time I had set for bedtime, with Marion and Carolyn in close attendance upon her.

"Thank you so much for everything," she said to them sweetly, as she reached the door of my room. "You simply have been wonderful to me, and so sporting over the way your boy friends acted. I only hope you understood that I couldn't help—that I wasn't really—" She stopped, and achieved what would have been a blush if it could have been seen through her clever make-up.

"We understood everything," Marion said with a significance that tugged at my laughter muscles. "And you were truly wonderful in your technique.

"Carol and I are wondering if you wouldn't give us some hints upon how you do it."

GIRLS RETIRE

It did not seem possible that any girl could be so stupid as not to know she was being "guyed," but Avis simpered with pleasure.

"I'll gladly pass on to you anything I know," she said, "but, of course, you know it is mostly a matter of one's personality and appeal. But I really must say 'Good night.' I'm so sleepy I don't know what I'm saying.

She went into my room and closed the door, and Marion and Carolyn bowed low before that closed door, stuck their tongues out at it and then, snapping into military form, wheeled and saluted me smartly.

"We, who are about to pound our respective ears, salute you," Marion said. "I hope I get through tomorrow without committing murder, but if not, something might be worth the chair, don't you think, Carol?"

She only whispered the words, but I put up a panicky hand for silence, and she danced over to me and kissed me warmly.

"Don't worry, Auntie Madge; I'll restrain myself nobly," she promised, and, seizing Carolyn by the waist, swung her away to their room, where I had sent Avis.

I waited only until Dicky came upstairs before going into my room, where I had sent Avis.

"I haven't time to tell you what it's all about," I told him, with magnificent disregard of rules for ending sentences, "but I want you to be ready to let Noel into the house quietly at 1 o'clock. He is coming back to see me at that time, and no one but you must know."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A Disease of Civilization

Many persons confuse a condition called "irritable colon" with a common ailment known as "mucous colitis." Though the symptoms of these disturbances are similar, the treatment is different. It can readily be understood that speedy cure is not to be expected when the correct treatment is not being used.

Dr. Copeland

To the numbers of persons who talk about having it, one would believe that everybody is afflicted with colitis. Fortunately this is not true and the real trouble may be simply a passing irritation of the colon.

Irritable colon is not as serious as colitis. It differs from it in that there is no marked inflammation or organic change of the colon.

It is a disease of modern civilization, most common among those who lead strenuous and poorly regulated lives. It is probable that our forefathers did not suffer from this affliction, certainly not as we do. It is often the result of overtaxed nerves, fatigue, anxiety, fear, worry and other emotional disturbances.

The trouble is frequently traced to some irritation within the body or as a reflex from some diseased organ. For example, it may be the result of an inflamed appendix or gall bladder. Poisons liberated from decomposed food may lead to an irritation of the colon. This is especially common among persons who are careless about their food and live on a poorly balanced diet, particularly if it is deficient in certain vitamins.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of distinguishing between mucous colitis and irritable colon. As I have said, the treatment of mucous colitis is different from the treatment of irritable colon. In colitis it is imperative that the colon be emptied and kept clean, and cure can only be hoped for when the underlying cause is discovered and removed.

Fortunately, the treatment and cure of irritable colon are simple and accomplished with less difficulty. Of course diet is important, but of greater importance is the necessity of eliminating all fear, anxiety and other emotional disturbances.

The diet should be simple, nutritious and of such foods as are easily digested. The meals should be prepared so that it is tempting to the eye as well as the palate. Plenty of fresh air, sunlight, adequate hours of rest and relaxation, are tonics of great value in the cure of this affliction.

If you are a sufferer from some intestinal disorder and believe you have colitis, I would advise that you consult with your physician. As you see, it may not be colitis at all, but really an irritable colon. It is best to seek medical advice before resorting to any remedies. Remember, your doctor has been trained in this work. Benefit by his knowledge.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Massacre of Honor-Tricks

Even great honor strength, perhaps including high-card tricks in trumps, does not form the basis of a good Penalty Double against freakish and unusual distribution, as two players learned to their sorrow in a recent Rubber game at a bridge club in New York. As a matter of fact, the possession of even the Ace and King of trumps is not ordinarily a sound basis for a Penalty Double of a contract of four, because it is quite fair to assume that the opponents, who have bid without these cards, have other distributional values to offset the fact that they do not have first and second-round control of the trump suit. However, it must be conceded that East and West, with a total of more than five honor-tricks between them, could not be accused of undue optimism in thinking that they might defeat the game contract undertaken by their opponents, whose values were mostly distributional.

South—Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ J 9 8 6 4 ♡ — ◇ 9 6 ♣ Q J 7 5 4 2
♠ 7 ♡ A 8 5 ◇ K 10 8 4 3 2 ♣ A K 6	North West East South	♠ A K ♡ Q 10 7 6 ◇ Q J 7 5 ♣ 10 8 3
	♠ Q 10 5 3 2 ♡ K J 9 4 3 2 ◇ A ♣ 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠ (1)	Double (2)	4 ♠ (3)	Double (4)
Pass	Pass	Redouble (5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—The hand is short of the necessary number of honor-tricks, but with two long major suits South desires to enter the bidding early, hoping that he may show his distributional values cheaply.

2—A sound Takeout Double.

3—A brilliant Raise. North has tremendous values in support of his partner's bid, although his lack of honor-tricks is painfully apparent. This bid is based not only on the slight hope that the contract may be fulfilled, but partially upon the proposition that if it is not, then East and West have a game at some declaration.

4—East has two solid tricks in the trump suit, with scattered honors in diamonds and hearts. He knows that his partner's Takeout Double has been based on a minimum of three honor-tricks; hence he feels that the penalty is safe, while any bid by East and West may result in accepting a penalty rather than inflicting one.

5—A daring call, based entirely upon distribution.

The play of the hand, it will be noticed, is simple. West won one club trick and East was able to cash the Ace and King of trumps. Beyond that there were no tricks for them.

Today's Question

◇ K 3 2

North / West East / South

◇ A 10 8 5 4

South is playing notrumps. How should he play the diamond suit to take the best chance of losing only one trick?

Answer: South should lead either a small card from his own hand to the King, or, if in North, the King and then a small card to the Ace-ten, finessing the Ten if East plays a small card. He can then only lose two tricks if West holds Q J x x or Q J x x x, and this he cannot prevent.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Watch out for the hard and fast jawline. It comes to women who have prejudices and stationary opinions, so maybe it won't catch you. Pursing the lips, pulling down the chin, getting fiber tensions all promote the too firm jaw expression. A good facial exercise to loosen up tight muscles is to smile and unsmile. It makes fibers more flexible, takes the knots out of them. Try massage. Spread on a heavy cream, tap quickly and briskly from chin tip to temples.

Professional women and business girls look better fitted for the job when the coiffure is sleek, shining, beautifully undulated and cut fairly short. Ringlets and flowing locks do not make for an appearance of efficiency. They belong to the young thing; they are hers by the rights of her tender years. All important is the cut. Thinning hair is a smart trick, let me tell you. The inexperienced or careless clipper is likely to make a sad mess of that job.

PRIMROSE PATH PATTERN 553

A Simple Quilt to Make

Primrose Path, far from being the path of dalliance, as its name might imply, is one of those quilts that are simple in construction and therefore quickly made. It is atttractive in three materials, one of which forms the path, while the most conspicuous print forms a joining pattern.

Pattern 553 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Household Hints

A piece of bread placed in the pot in which you are cooking cauliflower or cabbage will eliminate the unpleasant odor.

Save all the spiced, sweet vinegar which comes in bottles of sweet pickles or spiced fruit. This is delicious used in vegetable gelatin salads, for thinning salad dressing or to use for flavoring baked ham or pork.

Oop!

On the coast the gags deal with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the star, who has a habit of irking others with her comments. The self-conscious coasters were prepared for her, however. Frinstance—to Harold Lloyd, she said:

"And you, young man, aren't you connected with pictures?"

Aileen Pringle, who overheard the flippancy, interrupted with:

"Oh, Mrs. Campbell—I'm so glad I've met you at last—I've been drinking your soups for years!"

As If We Didn't Know

Arthur Murray says that gossip is news that the other fellow hasn't heard yet.

Overheard

At one of the movie places where they still dig up old silent pictures that have any ugh in them—an old Clara Bow film was shown. But the title was carelessly spelled out in the marquee. It read: "The Flee's In."

"Ah," said Yasha Frank, who saw it, "with the Itch Girl."

Shop Talk

Like the play doctors of the stage, there are movie medicos, who are called in to "doctor" sick pictures. One of these was shown a flopola, and asked what should be done about it.

"Just run the credits," he advised, "and follow them with a 5,000-foot fadeout."

Sinclair Lewisaying

Sinclair Lewis in his new book "Work of Art" remarks:

". . . the ability to stay up brightly all day and all night, and all day again, is probably, more than any technical trick or profound learning . . . the secret of hotelmen, physicians, sea captains, aviators, bootleggers and bridegrooms."

Observation

Russ King says professional humorists are complaining that there is nothing funny to write about our Congressmen since they are showing signs of life. Since when has anything been funnier than a Congressman showing signs of life?

Description

Wilson Mizner once described a hot-headed chump in this manner:

"That guy worked himself up into such a lather—you could have shaved Kansas City!"

Form of Criticism

Charles Hughes, the DAC News publisher, relays this one. Channing Pollock, the playwright, who enjoys heckling critics who have heckled him, was discussing columnists. Ren Wolf, said Channing, antedated Eugene Field by a few years as a columnist. Pollock added that Wolf was the first to inject the deeply personal note into his column on the old N. Y. Telegraph.

"I know about that personal note," said Channing, "because in those days I used to be rather careless about my clothes. Ren was a pal of mine and he used to personally protest about my baggy knees, but it did no good.

"So one morning he put this in his column: 'Item: Channing Pollock makes his own clothes!'"

Character

Edgar Norton, who has played butlers in movies since Hollywood began, had one hobby and ambition. The hobby was buying up all conceivable rights to "Alice in Wonderland" out of the money he saved from film butling. He felt it should be made into a picture. The ambition was to graduate out of butler parts.

Then not long ago, he peddled the rights he so carefully gathered to Paramount. But he couldn't get a part in the picture!

Nifties

David Murray: The trouble with a lot of guys who go away to forget is that they seldom forget to write home for money . . . Carey Williams: Snow is praised only in poetry—a poet never had to shovel any of it . . . Jack Berger: "Why not call them Ziegfeld Fillies?" Russell Johns: "The people must have tables to drink each other under!" . . Olin Miller: Often the deciding factor as to lending a man $10 is whether or not it is worth that much to get rid of him. . .Either the postoffice department is mistaken about that deficit or the movie and radio stars are lying about the fan mail they receive.

Heheheh

It was overheard on Wilshire Blvd. in Los Angeles. An actor was telling a new arrival from the East of the wonderful California climate.

"A doctor in New York three years ago said I was so sick I wouldn't live six months!" he boasted.

"Well," was the reply, "did you pull through?"

Ouch!

In one of the offices of a Hollywood executive there are tiny waste baskets. We wondered why when we saw them last July, but we forgot to ask. It appears that when the exec was working at another studio, where he was struggling for recognition, he incurred the enmity of a writer, who'd vent his ire by walking into the diminutive man's office, picking him up bodily, head down, and stuffing him into his large and spacious trash receptacle.

Nonsense

At one of the vaudeville houses the other week-end a group of cowboys was a feature. They played all sorts of instruments and made noises on some that were not. As two of the audience ankled out, one was heard to soprano:

"Those boys sure can play nearly everything."

"Yes," said her husband, "everything but well!"

Expert Acting Marks Penn's Harding Film

By MICHAEL SHAW

There is some extremely engaging acting in "Gallant Lady," the Penn's new feature; and with the cast including Ann Harding, Clive Brook, Tullio Carminati and Otto Kruger, why shouldn't there be?

Miss Harding is once more a lady with a problem, and this time it's little Dickie Moore.

Dickie is the child of the heroine and an aviator sweetheart who crashes and dies taking off on a New York-to-Bagdad hop. The marriage, unfortunately, was to have occurred after the flight.

Miss Harding is befriended by Mr. Brook, a derelict, once a fine physician, but imprisoned and ruined by a "mercy" killing. The baby is given up for adoption because its mother decides she has no right to ruin its life.

The foster mother dies, and some years later the foster father, Mr. Kruger, falls in love with a rather unpleasant lady, played by Betty Lawford. Meantime the baby has grown into a likeable boy, Miss Harding has become a successful interior decorator and Mr. Brook has reformed and backslid several times, has shipped before the mast for five years, has tried being a veterinary, and has nursed along his unrequited love for the lovely Ann.

Miss Harding encounters her boy in Paris and spends a deliriously happy time with him on the boat back to New York. When she finds Miss Lawford is to become Dickie's new foster mother, she deliberately sets out to break up the match and to marry Mr. Kruger herself. This she succeeds in doing, after many complications and much drama. So it all ends happily for everyone but Mr. Brook, who starts around the world again with the firm intention of getting drunk in every port.

Mr. Carminati plays an Italian count who pays court to Miss Harding and later to Miss Lawford, and he plays him to the hilt.

Mr. Brook also does a virtuoso job with the derelict. He has not been so convincing and expert for a long time. Miss Harding is most charming and able, as usual, and her gowns are stunning.

Mr. Kruger, the young Mr. Moore, and Janet Beecher, as Miss Harding's partner in the interior decorating shop, were all more than competent.

Muni Pleases In Stanley Comedy

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Suppressing a yawn generated by the continuance of movie-makers to present a newspaper office as it never was, we, nevertheless, award "Hi, Nellie," newspaper yarn in the Stanley, such approval as it deserves—and it merits plenty—for being a rousing comedy drama, with more stress on the comedy than on the drama.

Last week the Stanley had the "Grand Hotel" of a law office, this week it has the same treatment of a newspaper office and its staff—you know—the telephone switchboard opening, and then, zip, zip, zip into the various cells of that hive of activity and excitement, the editorial room of a metropolitan daily. There, according to the movies, the M. E. (managing editor to you) has to outshout his up-and-coming reporters and assistant editors

If it fools the customers, it's all right with us, but that doesn't diminish the fact that this film has a lot of action and a lot of real comedy, and a lot of the best characterization that Paul Muni has at his command. You see, Paul is the very efficient M. E. in this one. That is, until he "plays down" a story that the other papers go to in a big way. For that lapse he is punished by being demoted from M. E. to editor of the Advice to the Lovelorn department, whence the title "Hi, Nellie," Nellie Nelson being always the name of the conductor of that column, no matter whether the person be man or woman.

But in the end he is M. E. again, his work as a love expert giving him a lead that uncovers the real story of the matter that caused his dismissal.

Glenda Farrell pleases as a reporter, who also had been punished to the extent of being made adviser to the lovelorn. Ned Sparks, reporter, helps the fun along.

Oh, yes, it's just a trifle of dust in the atmosphere, but it gets in the eye. In one scene there are five bright, new shining coffee pails in hands of the java hounds. Well, of course, a new pail does get into an editorial office once in a great while, but five at once—oh, my dear!

Many Groups Preparing Plays

By GEORGE SEIBEL

That hardy pioneer group of our little theater world, the Playhouse of the Hebrew Y, is preparing to present Ansky's famous play, "The Dybbuk," within a month or two. This group has been reorganized under direction of Arnold S. Berke, and has outlined an ambitious policy.

Mr. Seibel

Play writing, acting, scene designing, costuming and lighting are to be fused into one unit. Critical minds are to be organized into a real community group.

Each of the members is to have an opportunity to give his best and get the best others have to give. Director Berke thinks he has under his wings "the raw material of renaissance."

"The Dybbuk" is a play that awes an audience regardless of faith by virtue of its vibrant theatrical spirit. It was the most impressive success sponsored by the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York.

ENTER MARTIN FLAVIN

Meanwhile Martin Flavin is enjoying a renaissance in Pittsburgh. Carl B. Cass has just produced "Children of the Moon" on the Hotel Schenley stage with his Pitt Players. And a newly formed dramatic club of St. Lawrence's Church will produce "Broken Dishes" under the direction of Peggy Dougherty and Norman Porter, both formerly of the George Sharp Stock Company.

"Broken Dishes" will be given in the Peabody High School on February 8 with a cast including Mary Margaret Flaherty, John McGonegal, Marcella Nickel, Edward Joyce, Thomas Sullivan, John Larkin, William Cunningham, Margaret Hauser, Alice Loibl and Harold Ventrone. Clyde Schaffer will sing some of his songs in sentimental vein.

Another church group, the Resurrection Players of the South Hills, get away from sophistication in their next production, "The Alarm Clock," by Avery Hopwood, to be given at the Brookline Public School February 13. This is a comedy of family life, far different from "The Butter and Egg Man" by George S. Kaufman, their previous production.

Most of the up-to-date Broadway successes recently shown in our little theaters missed fire because it's a long way from Main Street to Broadway.

The Resurrection Players also have found that amateur plays make money, having taken over $1,200 in five performances.

Regis Manning will direct "The Alarm Clock."

OTHER NEW THINGS

At the East Liberty Y. M. C. A., "Around That Corner" will be put on by Oscar E. Norbeck, next Friday. This revue will hit at many local abuses and may stir up something of a sensation.

"Granny Preferred," a three-act play by Dr. J. C. Logan and Harold Allen, will be presented at the Experimental Theater in Aiken avenue, January 29-31.

"The Guest," by Sarah C. Pettit, a German legend, is to be presented at the I. K. S. Playhouse, February 27-28.

All in a Day

The Bearded Angel

YOU WON'T believe it. I know I didn't. That is, until the newspaper clippings were thrust in front of these disbelieving eyes. Even then I had my doubts. And you probably will, too. But it happened. Where and when are two things I am not at liberty to divulge.

But let's proceed. I'm anxious to tell you—as it was told to me—the story of the Bearded Angel. Here goes:

They first saw him down on Cherry street early last year. Cherry street isn't a wealthy neighborhood.

The kids are perpetually dirty. They play ball or skip rope all day, and go indoors only when stomachs demand. So it is quite easy to understand why they saw the Bearded Angel first.

Little Anthony Mori saw the car. It was long and low, and had a uniformed chauffeur in front.

"Jumpin's sake!" yipped Anthony. "Lookit the bus!"

The car rolled slowly by. It didn't stop. It kept going, slowly. And as it passed, they saw the face of a kindly old man with a gray beard, looking out of the small panel window in the back. Little Anthony placed his thumb against his nose and wiggled the four fingers at the old man. But a moment later, he regretted it.

For, out of the spot where the window should have been, came a bony hand. And, before Anthony or anyone else realized what had happened, the pavement was alive with bouncing nickels and dimes and quarters.

The car kept going. . . .

Promptly at 1 p. m.—the same time—the next day, the big shiny limousine slid slowly down Cherry street again. This time, someone shouted, and the kids waited for the shower of coins. Hordes of children closed in behind the car as it moved past, and sure enough, the gray bearded figure thrust out a hand heavy with coins, and dropped them rattling to the pavement.

By the time the fourth day rolled around, a lot of mothers and fathers were looking out of windows at 1 p. m. And when the car hove into sight, a great cheer went up.

A double handful of coins came out the back window that day . . .

The gossips would probably still be discussing the mystery except for the fact that the car came to a stop one day.

The old man in the back rolled down the window. He smiled tiredly.

"You're a happy bunch of children, aren't you?"

The kids looked at one another. No one knew who should answer. Then little Marjorie Jones' mother elbowed through the crowd. She smiled.

"You certainly have the children crazy about you, Mister," she said. "They call you the Bearded Angel."

"But I'm not an angel." The voice was slow, kindly. "I'm doing this because I once had a little boy of my own and he had to leave me—in a hurry. I love to see children happy, even if they aren't my own."

"I know," nodded Mrs. Jones swiftly, "I understand."...

"Ya got any money for us?" That broke the spell. The old man looked at the youngster, and smiled.

"Certainly," he said.

From that day on, the crowd of children grew. The word spread, and they came to Cherry street from 10 blocks around just before 1 p. m. each day.

And the Bearded Angel never failed them. . . .

It was probably about 3 p. m. when Sergt. O'Toole came into the precinct house and stood before Capt. Jennings' desk. O'Toole removed his uniform cap and applied a snowy handkerchief to his forehead. Jennings kept writing for a moment, then looked up.

"Well?" He said.

O'Toole shrugged.

"The telephone report covers everything, I guess."

Capt. Jennings pounded the green blotter on his desk.

"Doggone it," he said. "I can't get any sense out of it. What happened? Do you know?"

"Yessir," said O'Toole. "Me and McKenna was covering the north side of Third, when it happened. It's the strangest thing I ever heard.

"We're a block away from the North Side National Bank, cruising slow, when we hear the alarm. Then, at that moment, we see two men come out of the bank with a package, or a satchel.

"Naturally, we give chase. As we fly by the bank, one of the clerks comes out, and points to the car ahead. It's going like the devil. McKenna starts to overtake him, and the hold-up car begins to slow up."

"Well?"

"Well, I've been in this department 27 years and I never seen anything like it. We follow him into Cherry street all set for the grab, when 200 kids suddenly come out in the center, right behind him, and cut us off. It was just like they expected the car.

"We couldn't get through for five minutes. You never saw such a mob. Later, we found the limousine down near the river. There was a fake gray beard in the back seat." . . .

Racket Expose In Davis

By MARGARET GARRAHAN

In the new cycle of racket expose yarns, product of repeal, comes "The Big Shakedown," current screen feature in the Davis.

Baring in startling, convincing manner the unscrupulous resources of post-prohibition racketeers, the picture deals with a beaten beer baron's activities as a manufacturer of sub-standard medications.

This all-powerful leech-like czar is the portrayal of the darkly dapper Ricardo Cortez, done with typical Cortez suavity. With Charles Farrell as his innocent accomplice, he begins his career as a manufacturer of tooth paste.

Bette Davis, sporting her new bob, portrays the young wife, and Glenda Farrell, as the racketeer's girl friend, does a grand bit in a hair-pulling contest. There are lots of thrills and enough chuckles to balance, provided mostly by Cortez's cortege of "muggs." A comedy featuring George Givot, an "ugly duckling" animated cartoon, a sport reel and Fox Movietone News complete the bill.

Spicy Program In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

"Spices of 1934" they call it in the Pitt, and spicy it is, too, in red-hot portions that will in all probability be considerably toned down by the official blue pencil before the show is much further on its way.

Not that the show isn't well done—it is. Stage scening, attention to details, effective lighting give the revue a pleasing finish. Only one thing is lacking, and that very much so—costumes.

Count Berni Vici is the cause of it all. He, with his Fifteen-Girl International Orchestra, provides a melodious background for the rest of the revue, comedy, singing and dancing, alike. Bobby Henshaw, as master of ceremonies, makes himself thoroughly at home by going about the audience and introducing himself. What's more, he puts it over.

Hand in hand, or maybe better termed, quip for quip, with him is "Oh-You're-Crazy" Joe Besser.

Harriet Cruise, known to microphone fans, pleased in a satisfying way with her offerings of song.

Of prime interest (to the male audience at least) is Mademoiselle Caroline, whose manipulation of two beautiful white fans was revealing, to put it mildly.

Wallace Ford, Dorothy Trees and a very babified Mary Carlisle supply the love triangle in "East of Fifth Avenue," which flickers from scene to scene in a screen story version of boarding house lives and loves.

Action Film In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Richard Barthelmess' flare for variety in interpretative roles has led him into Indian territory in his latest picture, "Massacre," in the Warner this week. As Chief Thunder Horse, sensational horseback rider and shooter at the World Fair, and champion of his downtrodden people back home on the reservation, the versatile Richard carves another notch in his big-league gun as a character actor.

Away from the reservation since he was a child, Chief Thunder Horse has become addicted to big money, flashy cars, trick clothes and white-skinned women. News that his father, Big Chief Black Pony, is about to join his hard-riding ancestors in the happy hunting ground, brings Joe Thunder Horse and his devoted servant, Black Sam, back to the reservation to face the deplorable conditions of an exploited and dying race.

The fire-brand from Chicago upsets the carefully constructed applecart of corrupt federal graft practices and lands himself in jail. An educated Indian girl, Ann Dvorak, and an aroused band of Indians, procure his release, and Joe Thunder Horse makes his way, by car and freight, to Washington to instigate a Senate investigation.

There is plenty of red-blooded action in this picture: "Massacre" is a forceful indictment of the last act in the drama of white domination of the red race. It is symbolical of the inevitable victory of mind over matter of guns over bows and arrows, of machinery over horseflesh, or corrupt civilization over savage simplicity.

Besides Fox Movietone News, the Warner program includes a Harry Langdon golf comedy, "A Roaming Romeo," and "The Tune Detective," a musical short consisting of a little of this and a little of that.

New Show Arranged For Hi Hat Club

The Hi Hat Club, formerly Sanders Inn, Aspinwall, will give a complete change of bill tonight. Jack Jenkins, master of ceremonies, Curt Guckert's Orchestra and a new floor show will be offered.

Barrymore, Jr., Angler

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 20.—Telegraph wires are stuttering eulogies from John Barrymore over the angling prowess of his year-and-a-half-old son.

The tiny Barrymore recently went sailing away on the family yacht, the Infanta, armed with a specially made $80 fishing pole. The butt of which fits into a leather belt around his baby waist.

Several days ago, in Mexican waters, the Barrymores, Pere and Fils, were sitting on desk. John, Jr., was comfortably ensconsed in his father's lap, and he was fishing. Suddenly, the pole at his waist gave a jerk.

The Barrymore family went into action. Grabbing the pole, John, Sr., began to play the fish, shouting for Dolores Costello to come and make motion pictures of the catch.

Hauled aboard, it proved to be a 20-pound barracuda.

In triumph, John wirelessed the news to friends in Hollywood. He plans to build a small trophy room onto the nursery when he returns here February 1 to make "The Devil's Disciple" for RKO. The mounted barracuda will occupy a place of honor.

Rivals, Stars in Pitt-Irish Game Tonight

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Keeping Davies Fine Step. Dukes and Game Profit. Record of High Merit.

Baseball Wants Youth. Last Stand By De Oro. Jumping Marks Periled.

That Duquesne University will lose Charles Robinson Davies in June only as a graduating student, and not as a coach, was good news not only to Duke supporters but to local basketball followers in general. In addition to giving Duquesne winning teams consistently, Davies is a splendid influence for the good of the floor game here as a whole, an influence for clean sportsmanship and court tactics as well as for a high quality of play. The signing of Chick to a new three-year contract assures the Bluff school continued success in the sport in which it has won two straight city championships and is well started toward a third after defeating Pitt in the series opener and following up with a 43-to-19 victory over Carnegie Tech last night, to stretch a string of consecutive triumphs to 23.

Chick Davies

The fact that Davies is one of the youngest basketball coaches in the country, being only 34, has not kept him from winning a ranking as one of the very best. In bringing the Dukes into national prominence and keeping there with the excellent teams he has turned out, the able Bluff mentor has made a record equaled by few college coaches. The present season, in which the Dukes have won eight games in a row on top of the 15 straight garnered last winter, is the tenth campaign for Davies at Duquesne, and in that time the Dukes have won 145 contests against only 49 defeats, a percentage of .747, or an average of practically three games won out of every four played. In this season's eight engagements the Red and Blue passers have amassed 341 points, so that they are still above the rare average of a point a minute.

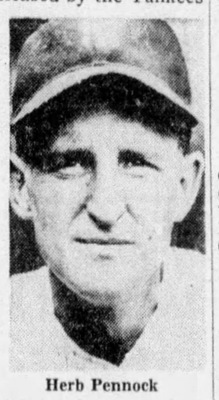
PRESENT TEAM PROBABLY CHICK'S BEST

In building his fine teams, Davies also has developed many individual stars, but it is doubtful if he ever before had a quintet as thoroughly good as the present five, even considering the famous combination that boasted Roy O'Donovan, Johnny Serbin, Sticks Monohan and Dom DeMaria. Other great names in Duquesne basketball history with whose high standards the play of the members of the 1933-34 aggregation compares favorably were Jock Rosenberg, Ganzy Benedict and Brud Stephens.

When Coach Davies graduates in June from the School of Education at Duquesne, with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education, eight players of the present varsity squad will graduate with him. These will include four regulars and one former regular who was beaten out for his first-string post, Jim MacDougall's forward position having been captured by Polly Birch last year after the Dukes lost to Westminster for their only defeat of the season.

PENNOCK AND RICE FAIL TO FIND JOBS

The call in major league baseball is for youth. Herb Pennock and Sam Rice, two of the veterans who are now free agents, can attest that fact after looking around in vain for new jobs. Since being unconditionally released by the Yankees and Senators, respectively, Pennock and old Sam have been trying to catch on with other clubs in the big show, but without success. Pennock will be 40 next month. Rice will be 42 at the same time. They have been told by every magnate approached that there is no room for them; that younger talent is desired.



Herb Pennock

Pennock in particular is disappointed. With Bob Grove and Rube Walberg gone from the A's, the willowy left-hander felt sure the need for another southpaw would prompt Connie Mack to give him a place on the club with which he broke in 22 years ago. But a talk with Mack disillusioned Herb. Connie said he was after younger men. About the same time Mack, like other club heads approached, said he was not interested in Rice. After his turndown in Philadelphia, Pennock tried to talk business with Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins, of the Red Sox, but there he failed again. Herb insists that he has another year of big league baseball left in his system, but unlike Burleigh Grimes, who will be tried again by the Cards, the chance that he will be able to sell the idea to any club owner appears very remote.

DE ORO TO RETIRE UNLESS HE QUALIFIES

Alfredo De Oro, now 71, has smashed all records for durability as a championship contender in sports, but the veteran cue marvel says that unless he qualifies, in the present Philadelphia competition, for the world championship pocket billiard tournament to be held in New York next month he will retire from tournament play. De Oro admits he still gets as much of a kick out of every shot as he ever did, and if his health would permit he'd spend six or seven hours a day around the table, but he's tired of traveling and thinks it's about time for him to move to the sidelines and let the younger fellows chalk up some titles. However, his performance in winning his first four games in the present tournament doesn't indicate he is very close to the cracking point.

The venerable Cuban says his cue skill has paid him an average of more than $6,000 a year since he won his first title in 1887, before most of his rivals of today were born. He recalls that he got his greatest thrill at St. Louis in 1904, when he was playing Jerome Keough for the world pocket billiard crown. Near the finish, Keough needed to pocket only nine balls and De Oro needed 72. Then Keough became too cautious. When he needed only three, De Oro still needed 39. Keough made one, but scratched, and De Oro finally won out. De Oro rates the original Jake Schaefer the greatest cueist of all time.

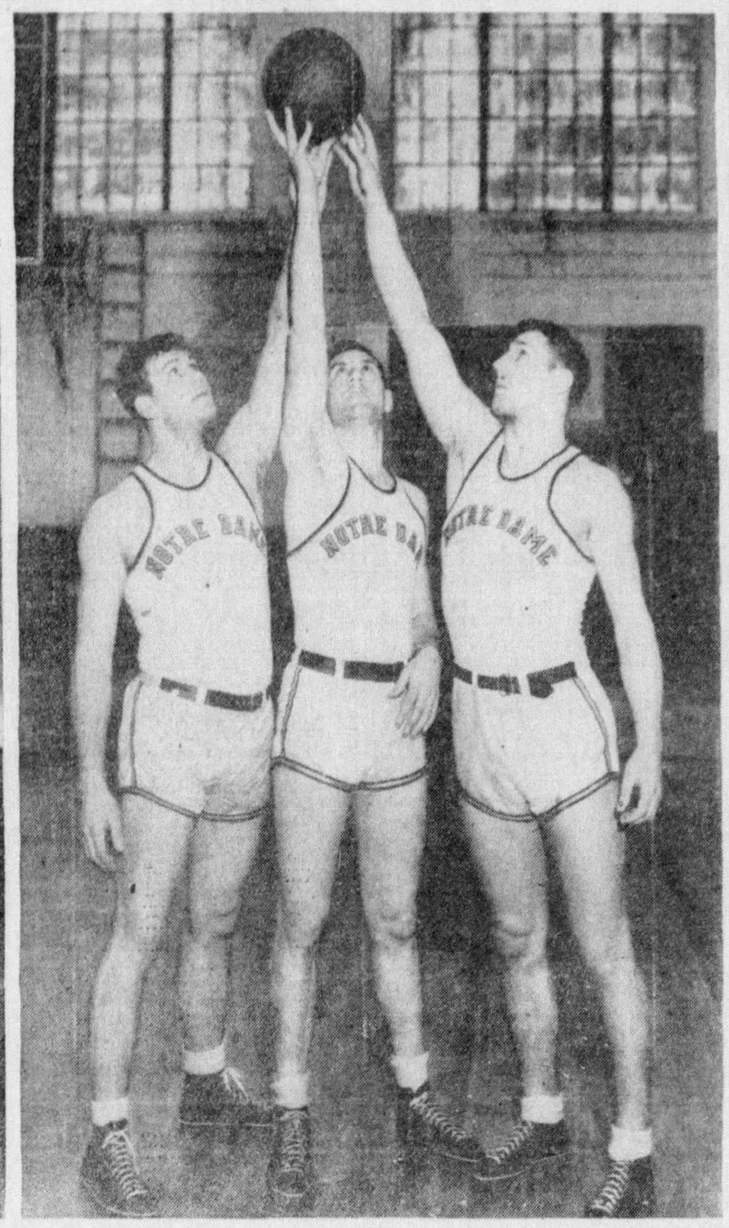
HIGH-JUMPING DUELS MAY BRING RECORD

Coming indoor athletic meets in the East are to have a high-jumping feature that may lead to the cracking of some records. Walter Marty, world champion, will leave Fresno, Cal., next week for New York, where he will compete in the first of a series of meets at Madison Square Garden on February 3. In these contests, Marty will encounter George Spitz, kingpin of indoor jumpers, and existing marks will be in danger while the duels are in progress.

George Spitz

Marty leaped to fame at the West Coast Relays in Fresno last summer with a jump of 6 feet 8⅝ inches. An injury to his left ankle, suffered while playing football for Fresno State College, evidently has not interfered with his jumping, as after a week of practice he has cleared 6 feet 4 inches several times recently. The Californian admits that Spitz is about the best indoor jumper in the world, but expects to beat the easterner at least once or force him to a new record to escape defeat.

COACH GEORGE E. KEOGAN, NOTRE DAME



DON ELSER — MARTY PETERS — CAPT. ED. KRAUSE

COACH DR. H. C. CARLSON, PITT

Undefeated since it lost to Pitt here last year, Notre Dame invades the Pitt basketball court at the Stadium tonight with a record of 22 consecutive victories, 11 of them this season, to protect and, although it has won only once in five games here against the Panthers across the years, it hopes to maintain its winning streak. Coaches Carlson and Keogan are keen rivals among the big league college floor mentors. The group of Irish players in the International News Photograph Service picture in the center above all are 6 feet 3 inches tall, which is plenty big enough.

DUKES DEFEAT TECH FOR 23RD WIN IN ROW

The most imposing record of consecutive basketball triumphs ever compiled by a Duquesne University floor team today is the proud possession of this year's crack squad. Celebrating the retention of Coach Chick Davies for three more years, the Dukes last night walloped Carnegie Tech, 43 to 19, before a capacity turnout in the Tartans' gymnasium.

Earlier yesterday, Davies, who is putting in his tenth season as head coach on the Bluff, affixed his John Hancock to a contract calling for his remaining as floor chief for three more years. He'll complete his work as an under graduate and receive his degree in the spring.

The victory over the Plaid was the twenty-third in a row over a period of two years for the Dukes. Off to a slow start, the Dukes applied the pressure in the second half and outscored the Tartans, 25 to 6. They led at the half, 18 to 13.

Duquesne played .281 ball last night, making good on 16 out of 57 shots taken from the floor. Carnegie Tech, on the other hand, was hitting only at a .140 pace, missing 37 out of 43.

The individual scoring honor was won by Paul Birch, with four field goals and two fouls. Paul Gibson, Tech's sophomore forward star, topped his teammates with five on one field goal and three charity tosses.

In the preliminary, the Tech freshmen defeated the Dukes' yearlings, 29 to 24. The lineups:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: HIS NAME WAS MUDD—Dr. Samuel A. Mudd (1833-1883) had the misfortune of attending in a professional capacity Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln. For this "crime," which he committed in complete ignorance of Booth's identity and before he even learned of the President's assassination, he was tried, convicted and sentenced to life long imprisonment. He was deported to Fort Jefferson, Dry Tortugas Island, Fla., where he served from 1865 to 1869, being pardoned by President Johnson. During his imprisonment, he was impressed into service as a physician during an epidemic of yellow fever which raged on the island. Notwithstanding this great service, he later was put in chains again and required to do menial labor under a rigorous guard in the broiling sun. His defender's address to the court during his trial I consider one of the grandest pieces of oratory ever delivered. THE HORSE'S MONUMENT—The inscription giving the history of the remarkable horse is as follows: "Underneath lies buried a horse the property of Paulet St. John, that in the month of September, 1733, leaped into a chalk pit, 25 feet deep, a-fox-hunting with his master on his back. And, in October, 1734, he won the Hunters' Plate on Worthy Downs and was ridden by his owner and entered in the name of "Beware Chalk Pit." The monument is near Farley, Hampshire.

Notre Dame's brilliant collection of basketballers and their impressive and equally brilliant score of 22 consecutive victories move into the Pitt Stadium Pavilion tonight, a spot which, during the past few years, has not been an especially fruitful one for the Irish.

It was just about a year ago that the Irish appeared here to try conclusions with Dr. Red Carlson's Panthers. All the South Benders received for their pains was the train ride.

LOST SECOND GAME

Directly afterward, however, the Notre Dames set out on their present victory spree, and added the Panthers to their list of victims in a return duel at the Bend.

Notre Dame, with 11 victories to its credit for the present campaign, has been picked by all and sundry to smack down the Panther tonight, all and sundry save the Panthers themselves, their coach, the optimistic Dr. Carlson, and Joe (Yatsi) Pasquerelli, Pitt's greatest rooter. The gambling boys are giving from two and one-half to four points. They figure that the Irish, led by the stellar Moose Krause, ably supported by such ace performers as Leo Crowe, Joe Voegele, Bill Newbold and Marty Peters, will tote too many guns for the Pitts.

The same veteran combination which has been hitting-and-missing for Pitt so far will oppose the Irish. At center, Claire Cribbs, who is playing the most consistent ball for the Panthers, may be counted upon to give the great Krause another tough battle. As Cribbs goes against Krause so may go the Pitt chances.

PITT HAS SPEED

Notre Dame will carry more size and beef into the battle, but it will not have any more speed, and as in the past, it may be that the old zip will tell the final tale.

Notre Dame has won but one of five games played in the Stadium pavilion, a jinx spot for the Irish if ever there was one.

The Panther Cubs and Kiski will entertain the early comers in a preliminary tussle, scheduled to get under way at 7 o'clock.

BETHANY ON TOP

BETHANY, W. Va., Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Bethany's lanky basketeers proved themselves two points a half better than the visiting Fairmont Teachers last night, defeating them, 46 to 42, in a close game. The lineup:

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The largest club sport week-end of the year looms for today and tomorrow as squash stars, handball contenders and tennisers battle around the town in quest of honors as varied as the respective fields of the aspirants.

Topping the bill is inter-city squash racquets program involving crack teams of Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Cleveland on the board courts of the Keystone A. C. Competition in class B of the P. S. R. A. loop and start of the yearly Pittsburgh Golf Club invitation singles tourney will supplement the racquet bill, while City Handball Leaguers make merry in heated title frays in both sectors of the bi-divisional circuit and net aces continue jousting in the fourth annual P. G. C. indoor invitation men's doubles conclave.

The interurban squash tilting, which incidentally carries with it the tri-city championship, got under way at 10:30 o'clock this morning, with Cleveland engaging Buffalo. Pittsburgh takes on the Ohioans at 3 this afternoon. The local squad opposes Buffalo in the wind-up of the round robin tomorrow at 3 p. m. The official lineups:

Pittsburgh—1, W. McCook Reed; 2, Henry V. Blaxter, Jr.; 3, William D. Bleke; 4, Edward E. Seifert; 5, Charles A. Eagan, Jr.

Buffalo—1, C. H. Polley; 2, Adrian W. Smith; 3, J. F. Rogers; 4, H. P. Burgard II; 5, R. H. Littell.

Cleveland—1, Andrew W. Ingraham; 2, LeRoy Weir; 3, Kenneth Haber; 4, George Francis, Jr.; 5, Dr. H. H. Wyand.

Capt. Karl Wolfe's P. A. A. contingent should clinch laurels as the class B squash campaign eases to its termination. The Winged Headers have only to account for the lowly Pittsburgh Golf Club aggregation by 3-2 margin to obviate mathematical possibility of a tie with the K. A. C.

Forty-four entries await the inauguration of activity in the Pittsburgh Golf Club invitation squash tourney at 1:30 this afternoon.

Downtown Y. M. C. A. risks top position in the class A handball tilting by invading Y. M. H. A. today, as the Keystone visits P. A. A.'s tail-end delegation. Meanwhile in class B, the Y. M. C. A. glovemen will seek to regain lost ground by crossing Third avenue for Keystone mix-up as P. A. A. entertains Westinghouse, and the pace-making Y. M. H. A. lads loaf.

Leon See's 'Inside Story' Of Carnera's Career

EDITORIAL FOREWORD

While dressing for his first professional bout, Carnera's gigantic physique amazes one of the author's old friends, who remarks: "Such a man must never be beaten!" That phrase immediately links Primo to Mr. See's dream of making a champion—a strange idea that he has been nurturing ever since 1894 . . . It is now September, 1928, and Carnera is getting ready to battle a heavyweight named Sebillo in Paris . . .

By LEON SEE

Developer and Former Manager of Primo Carnera, World Heavyweight Boxing Champion.

CHAPTER FIVE

FIRST BOUT, FIRST VICTORY

Destiny had spoken. My decision was taken. I was at last to put the idea into execution. Once set going, nothing should be able to stop Carnera before the final goal: the title of world's champion.

And Primo had not yet engaged in his first fight! There remained hardly a quarter of an hour before he would climb into the ring. So I went to find Sebillo, who in another corner of the room was getting ready.

Primo Carnera

"How much do you get for fighting Carnera?" I asked.

"Five hundred francs." (That was about $20 then.)

Then I remarked:

"Your young opponent has never fought. He's a novice, but he has uncommon strength. If he hits you, which is probable, you risk getting hurt badly. He weighs 80 pounds more than you," etc., etc. To be brief, I used very convincing words.

PRIMO'S FIRST TEST

Several minutes later, the fight began. Primo—who was by no means informed of the conversation that had passed between Sebillo and me—attacked, I have to admit, with a confidence worthy of praise. Certainly, his antics were not classic. His manner of moving awkwardly in the ring, of leaping around without rhythm or reason, soon aroused the public to real mirth, but when from an uppercut in the second round—my time had been very well chosen—he sent his rival to the mat for the fatal 10 seconds, there was a moment of silence in the hall, almost stupefaction; then followed immense applause.

The idea was under way; the first step had been taken . . . In the street, at the door of the Wagram Hall, about 500 persons awaited the exit of Primo. When he appeared, tremendous and overflowing with joy, the hurrahs rang out. Scraps of conversations reached my ears:

"What a colossus!" . . . "He will beat everyone!" . . . "Future world's champion!" . . .

HAILED BY PRESS

The next day entire newspaper columns were devoted to the new fistic revelation. It was a concert of praise, of optimistic predictions, the commencement of glory . . .

My first visit was to Jeff Dickson, who was waiting for me impatiently.

"You can brag," he said to me, of having discovered a really sensational boxer. I have never seen a success like this. For his second fight the place will be too small."

"That is what I think," I parried.

"He can fight next Wednesday, if is all right with you."

"Against whom?"

What do you think of Joe Thomas? I offer you 2,000 francs."

"Let us say 3,000 francs and it's a go."

"All right," said the promoter, "I will prepare the contracts. And by the way, I think that Carnera has established a record: he must be the only boxer in the world to receive 3,000 francs (about $120) for the second bout of his career."

KNOCKS OUT THOMAS

It was a fact: the road on which I had entered with the formal intention of not leaving it whatever happened—the commencement of the solution of a formidable problem through the absurd (a "reductio ad absurdum" of the ring) had already given a result. I was convinced that in a ring combat, victory, assured by any manner of scheming, is worth more than anything else, even the purse.

Now Joe Thomas was a dangerous hitter, but I was convinced that the rapid and sensational victory of Carnera could not have failed to impress Joe . . .

The Thomas bout was almost an exact repetition of the preceding encounter, with the exception that it was in the third round that Carnera's adversary took the count and also that, in the second, Thomas landed a hard right to Carnera's chin.

I had an instant of worry: Carnera gave evidence of having felt the blow. But with surprising energy and a desire to win, he valiantly resumed the attack. Primo again did not know that his winning had been anticipated by me.

FAME—AND OFFERS

This second victory made the crowd delirious. Primo's popularity in Paris was already solidly established. More than ever, he must not be beaten!

The following days the most favorable comments appeared in the newspapers. Photographs of the colossus were published everywhere and his reputation was already spreading to foreign countries. Particularly Italy was very much interested in the eventual discovery of a national champion. Offers began to pour in. . . .

But Jeff Dickson had a new proposition. The evening of the Carnera-Thomas match the Wagram Hall established a record in box-office returns. It was necessary to close the doors at 9 P. M. and more than 500 persons could not find seats.

"I offer you a bout at the Paris Circus.' Dickson told me two days later. "and Carnera will have the star bout."

"Who will be the opponent?"

"I have thought of Rugirello."

"What about the purse?"

"Five thousand francs for the third fight. You can say that you have broken all records." (That offer amounted to about $200.)

One of Rugirello's associates had been a friend of mine for many years . . . Well, to cut a long story short, it was with no great worry that I saw the night of the third "fight" arrive.

This encounter produced the first really comic incident in the career of the giant, an incident which was bound to be followed by a multitude of episodes, some dramatic, others of perfect burlesque; but—let us return to our third triumph.

A HUMOROUS INCIDENT

We arrived early at the Paris Circus, Primo and I, because I wished to talk with Rugirello's second before the fight, to reassure myself finally that everything was in good order.

"You know, Leon," he said "that my good man has a weakness for port. Well, there is an entire bottle in his dressing room. At present, he must be on the way to finishing it. When he climbs into the ring he will be in such a state that it will scarcely need a push to make him stumble."

But some unforeseen things had happened in my absence from Primo's dressing room.

Carnera—in spite of his two first victories and the beginning of confidence in himself which they had inspired—was in reality rather nervous. His opponent did not lack class. He had scored several successes in England and Italy. So, Primo, somewhat worried, had remained alone in his dressing room, and, as I did not come back soon, he became restless. He thought of nothing better to do than to send one of his pals to the bar upstairs to fetch him a stiff drink. This bracer was followed by another, by a third and a fourth and, when I arrived at the small room, I had the premonition that there was something abnormal:

INTOXICATED RIVALS

There was Carnera singing happily while he bandaged his hands; his eyes were shining and I needed only a second to realize that my pupil was in the same state in which his opponent should be!

I had a moment of terror, a rapid intuition of imminent disaster. In a few minutes of absence, of inattention, all my preparations—the Idea itself—might have been destroyed as a castle of cards. The situation was serious and at the same time burlesque.

Soon they sent for us for the "big fight!" While Primo ascended to the ring with not very sure steps, I kept an anxious eye on his opponent, who was passing through the ropes from the opposite side. Then I felt immediately reassured. He literally reeled. Contrary to my bad boy—who, I had just discovered, with the wine became gay—his opponent seemed to be the prey of a profound port-aesthesia. However in the immense crowd there was not a single soul who had the least idea of the tragicomedy that was taking place within the ring, your author excepted.

ANOTHER KNOCKOUT

In the condition in which they were, what kind of a fight would take place? I trembled in advance. Happily all ended well. Primo, to whom his four drinks had only had the effect of exhilaration, attacked immediately with energy. He missed at least six jabs, a dozen crosses and an equal number of uppercuts which the other, much more experienced, instinctively ducked in spite of the fumes that darkened his brain. Then, realizing that for some unknown reason his adversary seemed incapable of hurting him, Carnera felt all his confidence return. He dominated his opponent in the course of the first three rounds, while the latter did absolutely nothing.

In the fourth round, Rugirello—reeling about from the port and a good number of hard if not precise blows—had ceased to defend himself. So the referee had the very happy inspiration of stopping the bout. This time Carnera had won on a technical knockout.

The defense the Connelley Trade School quintet had built for Ed Spotovich, star South High center, almost cost the defending City League champions their lead in Section I yesterday. Connelley, however, cracked in the final period after having led South all the way and lost out, 30 to 26.

In Section II, Langley took undisputed possession of first place by defeating Oliver, 43 to 13, while South Hills was being upset by Allegheny, 38 to 37. In other games, Schenley tripped Fifth Avenue, 34 to 26, and Perry downed Vocational, 29 to 17.

Connelley lost out in the final quarter when its two stars, Turkovich and Ptacek, were banished on personal fouls. The South attack was led by Galiszewski, who counted nine points. Evanoski, at center for Connelley, outplayed and outscored Spotovich, who had set a high scoring record on Tuesday against Allderdice by getting 28 points. Westinghouse lost to Shaw High School in a non-league game, 32-31.

Jackson Refused Pardon by Landis

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—The portals of organized baseball are closed forever to "Shoeless Joe" Jackson and his confessed cronies, who staggered the national game back in 1919 by "throwing" the world series to the Cincinnati Reds.

They can't come back.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who was named commisioner of the organized game as the scandal flared, shut off their last ray of hope yesterday when he denied the application for reinstatement made by Jackson. He said:

"Several others have asked for reinstatement in the past and they, too, have been turned down."

George Julius Gets Lone Mitt Victory

CLEVELAND, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Cleveland amateur mitt stars turned back a delegation from Pittsburgh last night by taking three of four inter-city bouts.

Only lightweight George Julius was able to gain a decision for Pittsburgh. He defeated Herman Barnett.

Mat, Weight Titles At Stake Tonight

The Boys' Club of Pittsburgh, 4412 Butler street, tonight is to stage the Allegheny Mountain Association Junior weight lifting and wrestling championships. The competitions are to get under way at 8 o'clock, with athletes from district Y. M. C. As., colleges and athletic clubs striving for the titles.

Shields and Lott In Tourney Finale

MONTREAL, Jan. 20.—Frank Shields, of New York, U. S. No. 1 tennis star, and George Lott, veteran Davis Cup ace, clash today in the final round of the annual Canadian covered courts tennis tournament.

BROUILLARD WINS

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(AP.)—Lou Brouillard, chunky Worcester southpaw, who has held the welterweight and middleweight titles in his short career, banged out a one-sided victory over Bob Olin, New York light-heavyweight, in his Garden debut last night, but had a narrow squeak carrying off a split decision of the judges and referee at the end of 10 rough rounds.

DOUBLES NET PLAY NEAR FINAL

Quarter-final and semi-final pastiming stands out as this afternoon's feature of the fourth annual Pittsburgh Golf Club invitation men's doubles indoor tennis tournament, in progress since Thursday on the covered clay courts of the Northumberland organization. The starting field of 34 teams has been cut to a group of nine surviving outfits, among these being but five of the original seeded list of eight outfits.

Today's card calls for completion of one third-round fray and four contests in the bracket of eight between 12:30 p. m. and 4 o'clock. At 4:30, the upper semi-final graces the slate, with the lower penultimate engagement getting under way at 5. The wind-up, according to Chairman Charley Lockhart, will be staged tomorrow at 2:30. The summary:

Second round: Upper half—John D. Evans and E. A. Knoche defeated Crosby Leyda and Robert T. Lampus, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Lower half—Dr. William S. McElroy and George C. Burgwin, Jr., won from E. C. B. Gould and Thruston Wright, by default; King Moore and Robert C. Schmertz won from John D. Beatty and William R. CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Scores of Steubenville's leading citizens lived in the past and gloried in its memories as they feted Honus Wagner yesterday. Thirty-nine years ago this coming spring the youthful Flying Dutchman left his home, in company with Brother Al, to join the Steubenville club of the Tri-State League.

It was the first "pay-dirt" Honus struck in the colorful quest that led to fame and renown, and the Rotarians thus built their banquet around their diamond hero whose response to a toast left tears and laughter. . . . When Wagner sat down he was handed a slip that contained the roster of the 1895 Steubenville club. . . . The names that greeted his watery eyes, yet causing them to shine with the old-time lustre, were: Jim Cooper, Pete Lavelle, Toots Barrett, Dolly Gray, Si Jeffries, Ross Holson, Jake Bullock, Harry Prichard, Claude Ritchey, Al Wagner, Honus Wagner, Tom Geary, Wallier Carr, Harry De Moss, Stupe Ulum, and another outfielder who later became Father Signenn. . . . George Moreland was manager of the club.

Among the tales unfolded by Wagner was one concerning Ulum, who apparently was the Casey Stengel of the period . . . Stupe generally had a few "plants" in the grandstands . . . He gave these fellows quarters to toss out whenever he made a long or important hit . . . The staged stuff would start a shower of silver and Stupe lived the life of Reilley . . . One day he was fined $5 by an umpire . . . The umps would not allow Stupe to play the succeeding afternoon until the fine was paid . . . Quoth Honus:

"Ulum made a speech, passed the hat in the bleachers and after paying his fine he was about 16 dollars to the good."

Wagner was accompanied to Steubenville by Bill Benswanger, and both made speeches last night at the Father and Sons' banquet of the United Presbyterian Church of Crafton . . . In the latter audience were many fathers who were around the Carnegie-Crafton district when Honus made his bow in the game . . . Among these was Francis E. Proctor, a Crafton resident and business man of Pittsburgh, who is Wagner's age . . . Proctor also was a friend of Ed Delehanty who ranked with Honus as the greatest batter of the day . . . Proctor has a Delehanty memento, which he treasures highly . . . But let him tell it:

"Perhaps you don't know it, but Big Ed, a Cleveland boy, emulated Wagner in taking his first league job—he climbed a convenient freight out of Cleveland. . . . He had secured a berth with the Mansfield club, but the trick was to get to Mansfield. . . . Well, Ed got as far as Crestline and then faced a walk of a dozen miles to join his club. . . . Luckily a newspaperman driving along in a horse and buggy picked him up and D—— arrived in tip top shape. . . . I happened to be at the Mansfield park the day he was playing his last game. . . . As the game ended, he tossed me the ball and remarked: 'Here, young fellow, keep this as a reminder of me—I'm on my way to the big leagues.'"

Manager George Gibson, of the Pirates, expects to motor to his Canadian home tomorrow. . . . Gibby did not succeed in putting over any deals during his visit here, but he will be on the job at the schedule meeting in New York in February, ready to talk turkey to rival pilots.

CENTRAL LOOP RIVALS CLASH

By TOM BIRKS

The two leaders in the Central District Soccer League both break into action this afternoon, seeking to collect points enough to stay out in front in the titular race. Old Carnegie has the Dunwick Rovers for opposition. The young Strip aggregation, after its sensational victory over Arsenal, should give the Beadling boys plenty of worry. Arsenal, the other contender, meets the young Pittsburgh Rovers team at the Butler street grounds, and should have little difficulty capturing the two points involved.

Curry clashes with Morgan in a national open cup replay at Greenlee Field tomorrow afternoon. Last Sunday the teams were deadlocked at the end of 90 minutes of play.

MANY STOCKS GAIN DESPITE SELLING

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Despite heavy profit taking in the early trading today many stocks edged a little higher. Oils were rather firm.

American Tobacco B gained a point and small advances were recorded by United States Smelting, Socony-Vacuum, Loews, New York Central, Consolidated Gas and Standard Oil of California. United States Steel was steady, but Case and Delaware and Hudson eased slightly.

Foreign exchange rates were rather narrow in the early dealings. The British pound was off 1¼ cents at $5.01½ and French francs, at 6.28¾ cents, was up .01¼ of a cent. The other European gold currencies were about steady at the opening.

Wall street was wondering just how far the Federal Reserve Bank of New York could go in its buying of gold abroad for the purpose of restraining the climbing propensities of the dollar until, the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund becomes available. Indications, it was said, were that purchases in London had amounted to around $2,000,000 a day on three days of this week and on Friday London reported that some $4,500,000 in gold had been taken for American account.

Reports that the so-called sterling "bloc" might break up when the new dollar stabilization fund gets to work were given little credence in banking circles. It was pointed out that the sterling group of currencies has even received a new recruit. Argentina announced that henceforth the paper peso will be pegged to the English pound instead of to the French franc. The pegging rate will be at 15 pesos to the pound.

Although the $12,000,000 expansion in brokers' loans attracted the attention of market observers, it was argued that the increase to a total of $758,000,000 was comparatively small considering the recent broadening of trading. This total was 106 per cent, however, above the aggregate of a year ago.

GRAINS START FIRM, SAG

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Grain prices turned downward today after a show of firmness at the outset. Profit-taking on the part of recent buyers of wheat was a bearish factor. Opening ⅛-½ higher, wheat afterward receded to below yesterday's finish. Corn started at ⅜ off to ⅛ up, and subsequently sagged all around.

REPATRIATION OF MONEY EXPLAINED

By LEWIS HANEY,

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—There is much talk of a "repatriation" of funds. Some people profess to see a tendency of funds to rush back to this country. That, of course, would mean a demand for dollars, and would tend to put dollars up in value while the government is trying to put them down.

One reason for the new "stabilization fund" is the alleged need to control this anticipated movement of funds back to America. The Treasury presumably would sell dollars cheaply, thus supplying them to persons who desire to transfer foreign funds back into dollars. That would keep down the price of dollar exchange.

OUTFLOW HEAVY

I find that many people do not understand all this, beginning with why and how the funds were first "expatriated."

It is estimated that upwards of one billion dollars have left the country since last March—perhaps two billions. These funds were transferred abroad because Americans, and foreigners having investments here, mistrusted the dollar. They anticipated inflation and dollar devaluation, to say nothing of taxes and NRA restrictions.

So they sold American commodities or securities in foreign markets and left the proceeds abroad. O. some bought foreign commodities and securities, paying for them in dollars.

In these and other ways, they traded dollars for pounds or francs, while the dollar was still worth nearer 100 cents than it is now, and they could get a pound for only $4.50 or thereabouts.

Now it is argued that these people may want to switch back into dollars.

Unquestionably, most men like to have their money at home, and if other things are equal, will not send it abroad.

But above all, men want to make money, and if all these funds are to be repatriated, it will be either to take a profit on the transaction, or to enter the speculative and investment markets here.

If the dollar were really going to be stabilized at home, it would be safe to get back into dollars, and those who sold 75-cent dollars would make a nice profit by buying back 60-cent dollars.

Others might figure that it is time to put their foreign funds back into American stocks, either for a speculative ride or as an investment. Of course, the dollar may still be cut 20 per cent to the so-called 50-cent level, but they would count on speculative gains offsetting losses in the purchasing power of their money.

In addition, foreigners who have sold dollar exchange "short" would "cover," and might enter speculation in our stocks.

DOLLAR WOULD MOUNT

All this, if it should happen, would run the dollar up, and would put the pound down. Already we find the dollar sticking above 62 cents in exchange, despite the proposed devaluation, while the pound has fallen below $5. (The latter means that the dollar is so strong that it takes fewer dollars to buy a pound sterling.)

Of course, this tends to defeat the government's plans to depress the value of the dollar and to inflate prices here.

This is where the "stabilization fund" comes in. The two billions taken by the government as the result of "writing up" the paper dollar quotations of gold, is to be used to increase the supply of dollars.

These will be sold to people who want to get back into dollars. They will thus be used to fight any rising trend in dollars. "Stabilization" at present really means "depressing."

If left alone, dollars would certainly rise in value, and the average of commodity prices would therefore probably decline. This is true because we are a creditor nation and our exports exceed our imports, so that money tends to come our way. Moreover, we have a big potential gold reserve.

But we insist upon forcing the dollar down by "devaluation," and forcing prices up by "inflation." The government is selling dollars cheap to buy gold dear. That is what "stabilization" now means.

HEAD OF LODGE HOME DIES

The Rev. Walter K. Doutt, 50, superintendent of the Odd Fellows Home, 3530 Davis avenue, for the last five years, died yesterday. Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at the home.

The Rev. Mr. Doutt was born in Rochester, Pa., and preached in West Virginia 20 years before coming to Pittsburgh.

He was a member of the Glen Elk Lodge No. 95, I. O. O. F., at Charleston, W. Va., the Masons and Knights of Pythias.

He leaves his wife, Iva L. Figley Doutt; three sons, Eugene, Walter and Harold, of Moundsville, W. Va.; two brothers, William and Lacock Doutt, both of Rochester, and two sisters, Mrs. Alice Gropt, Beaver Falls, and Mrs. Eva Christopher, Rochester.

POOR TAX SET AT 2 1-2 MILLS

The County Commissioners have reset the poor tax at 2½ mills.

The tax was 3 mills in the past two years and was reduced to 2¼ Thursday, pending approval of the Poor Board.

The Poor Board did not approve, the members saying they could not meet their budget on the suggested rate. As it now stands, the half-mill cut deprives the board of about $400,000 revenue.

Formerly 1½ mills, the poor tax millage was raised to 3 in 1932 to meet the relief burden.

CHAPTER XV.

"Did she have any enemies that you know of?"

"No, indeed. Everybody loved her."

"Now, Mrs. Phelps, suppose you tell us just how you found Mrs. Paige that last night. You came alone, of course?"

"Yes, quite alone. I drove over in my own car. Sunny seemed rather depressed and upset, but I attributed that to her condition."

"Did she mention any phone call that she had received that day that had frightened her?"

Mrs. Phelps looked at him in surprise. "No, indeed."

"Did she mention a letter that she had received in the morning mail?"

But Mrs. Phelps shook her head.

"What did you do all the evening?"

"We went up to Sunny's boudoir and talked about all the things that women generally do talk about."

"I'm going to ask you a somewhat embarrassing question," began Anderson diffidently. "I hope you'll feel inclined to answer it honestly. Were Mr. and Mrs. Page happy together?"

Never Quarrelled

Mrs. Phelps colored and twisted her handkerchief nervously.

"I can't say—" she started.

"Oh, come," interrupted Anderson. "Mr. Paige is your friend, too, and you don't like to tell tales on him? Is that it?"

Mrs. Phelps nodded gratefully. "Please don't repeat anything that I say, will you? It was rather common knowledge that Ranny stepped out. There was a lot of gossip about it. It made Sunny awfully unhappy. But they never quarrelled or anything like that. She loved him devotedly and I think he loved her, too. But you certainly don't think that Ranny had anything to do with this, do you?"

"I'm not in a position to say whether Mr. Paige killed his wife or not," replied Anderson tersely. "These are simply questions which are customary and proper in cases of this kind. What do you know of this valuable jewel that Mrs. Paige wore frequently—I mean the pearl and diamond pendant?"

"Why, I suppose you mean the Czarina's pearl. I don't know much about it. Sunny loved it and wore it a lot. Her father gave it to her."

"Did you know its value?"

"No, not exactly. I do know it was valuable, though."

"Did Mrs. Paige ever tell you that it was not a genuine jewel at all but simply an imitation?"

Shadow of Fear

Mrs. Phelps half-rose in her chair in genuine astonishment. "What do you mean?" she said sharply. "That pendant was not imitation. I know something about gems—that was a very good pearl although not large."

But Anderson made no effort to clear up his mysterious question. He merely smiled and started off on another track.

"I'll ask you about something else," he said easily. "Now I don't want you to think that I am questioning Mrs. Paige's honor in any way, but I should like very much to know if she had any admirers, anyone who might have done this thing out of revenge or jealousy."

And now, closely observing Mrs. Phelps, I was certain that I saw a certain shadow of fear in her eyes. Instead of answering she pressed her handkerchief to her face and began to sob.

Anderson waited patiently.

"It's a very important question," he said.

"There wasn't anybody," declared Mrs. Phelps, still sobbing. "She loved her husband alone. Oh, this seems so terrible—I cannot believe that poor little Sunny is dead!"

"And is there nothing that you can tell me that will throw any light on the matter?" asked Anderson wearily, seeing that he had exhausted Mrs. Phelps' store of knowledge.

"Not a thing. May I go now?"

She rose to her feet and then I saw her sway slightly and her eyes grew distended as they rested on one of the French windows leading into the garden.

Intruder Escapes

My gaze followed hers, just in time to see the outline of a white face pressed against the pane. I saw only the general outline, but it was certainly a face.

"The window! The window!" I shouted. "Somebody's there listening! You take the front door, Anderson, and Carroll and I will go for the garden!"

In one instant we were all on the porches and the garden was alive with searchlights and officers. Not more than 30 seconds could have elapsed from the time when I saw the face and when I stood on the spot where it had been—yet there was no one there!

"Are you certain that you saw someone, Kay?" asked Anderson at length, when every inch of the garden had been searched. "I wonder if you aren't seeing things!"

"Dead certain," I answered. "I don't know whether it was a man or a woman, but I certainly got a glimpse of a white face peering in at us."

The Inspector examined the ground under the window carefully, but due to a long dry spell the baked earth failed to show any impression. The officers stationed at the entrance door and the garden walk reported that no one had entered or left, and Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, who was at work in the kitchen, likewise had seen no one loitering about.

Perhaps 10 minutes had passed before we returned back to the house, and just as I set foot on the porch, I saw a funny thing happen. Through the lighted window, I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Phelps turn hastily from the rosewood desk in the library—the one which I had seen Anderson lock earlier in the day.

I was not sure that the neighbor had been tampering with it, however, and before I could report what I suspected, Anderson and Carroll had passed me and gone on into the room.

The inspector's face was grim. I knew that he resented the fact that the intruder—whoever it may have been—had escaped us.

"Now, Mrs. Phelps," he said to the lady who was still standing, "you are certain that you saw someone at that window?"

"Indeed, I did," she replied. "I cannot tell you if it was a man or woman, but I saw the outline of a face pressed close to the screen as if someone were trying to overhear us."

Offers to Help

"Maybe one of Judson's men," said Anderson, in an aside to me. "That's the kind of a trick he would pull. Though I don't see how he managed to get away so quickly."

"If there are no more questions, I think I shall go," said Mrs. Phelps. "This has upset me not a little bit."

"I'm sorry," answered Anderson courteously. "It has been very unfortunate, but I doubt that it was any more than some curious hanger-on. Would you like one of my men to drive back with you?"

"That's not necessary," responded Mrs. Phelps. "I live only a short distance and I am not afraid. You will let me know if there is anything more that I can tell you or any way in which I can help?"

"Thank you very much. You have been very kind. I would appreciate it if you would let me know any ideas which may occur to you or anything else which you can recall that might give us a lead. Good night now and thank you again. Officer Carroll here will take you down to your car."

A minute or two later we heard the hum of her motor going down the drive.

"Queer business," commented Anderson. "I wonder who was at that window?"

"I wonder if Mrs. Phelps really wanted something out of that desk," I said. "I saw her turn away from it as I came up on the porch."

Anderson gave me a swift glance and then groaned aloud.

"Oh, Kay, why didn't you tell me? That's the answer, of course. The woman wanted something out of that desk and she had a good 10 minutes with it——"

"But you told me that you had locked it—" I interrupted. "She couldn't have taken anything from it."

Desk Unlocked

Disgustedly Anderson walked over to the handsome piece of furniture and touched the lid. It opened quite readily. Then, stooping, he picked up a woman's hairpin from the floor.

"See," he said, holding it out. "Here's woman's old standby. Mrs. Phelps came here to get something from the desk—possibly the letter of which Mrs. Deane has told us. Then she got rid of us by getting someone—probably a confederate she had with her in the car—to simply walk up to the window and look in. In our absence she took whatever it was she was after. MacNalley!"

The officer promptly appeared at the door.

"Do you know if anyone searched Mrs. Phelps' car?"

"Did it myself, sir," answered MacNalley. "Flashed my light all over it. It was empty."

"Maybe I'm wrong, then," said Anderson in a baffled tone. "But I'm certain that Mrs. Phelps took something that was of vital importance!"

And so it was. There was the open desk, the bent hairpin—and Mrs. Phelps safely on her way home with the incriminating evidence.

And I wondered what this woman, who called herself Sonia Paige's best friend, had carried away with her and what possible connection she could have with the murder.

"How about following her up and demanding an explanation?" I suggested.

"We wouldn't get any," replied Anderson. "She would deny having opened the desk and you are not in a position to claim that you actually saw her do so. Besides I have sent for Randolph Paige to come here and he is d[illegible]nd. I want to talk [illegible]arroll first, too. We'll leave Mrs. Phelps until tomorrow morning."

Synopsis

Sonia (Sunny) Paige, wife of socially prominent Randolph (Ranny) Paige, is found hanging by a silk dress cord from the chandelier in her boudoir. An autopsy reveals that Sunny had been suffocated first with the tassel of the cord and then hung. Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, says the night of the tragedy was her night off and that Mrs. Phelps, a neighbor, was to spend the evening with Sunny. Inspector Anderson is furious when Ranny employs Kirk Judson, a shady private detective, to investigate the tragedy. Anderson and Judson decide to forget their antagonism and work together. Anderson questions Mrs. Phelps.

SERBIAN ARTILLERY IN ACTION—ENGLISH TROOPS IN TRENCHES IN FRANCE

By the end of July, 1914, Austria-Hungary and Serbia had clashed in war. Germany and Russia, their respective allies, watched, prepared to the teeth. Germany asked France whether she would stay neutral. Not receiving a definite "yes," Kaiser Wilhelm declared war on her (Aug. 3, 1914), marched his troops through neutral Belgium, within 17 days almost reached Paris, was checked at the Marne, prolonged trench-warfare followed.

The breach of neutrality led England to declare war against Germany. Japan joined Britain. A whole chain of nations was soon drawn in.

Czar Nicholas II declared war November 3, 1914. Successful at first, the Russians soon were trapped by Hindenburg (1914-East Prussian marshes), 1915 driven from Galicia, Poland. The next year Russia won striking victories. However, disaster was inevitable, due to mismanagement. Revolution broke out early in 1917, overthrew Czarism; revolutionists made peace with Germany (Brest Litovsk) sacrificing large western portions of Russia. The prospects of the Central Powers, holding their own on the remaining fronts, seemed very hopeful at home at the close of the third war year.

(History of the Russian Revolution)

UNITED STATES GUNNERS AT TOP SPEED

Germany, though inflicting great damage by her submarines, was unsuccessful on the sea. The alliance of the United States with the Allies spelled defeat to the Central Powers. Ten million young Americans registered for war service within two months of the declaration of war (April 6, 1917). The whole of American industry, with its tremendous resources, was enlisted to produce war materials and supplies. The American Navy and the Army appeared in the battle zones. The idea of Gen. Pershing and others were accepted and trench warfare was changed into a terrific offensive.

INSULIN, SECRETION OF PANCREAS—DIABETES

Pancreas, a gland below the stomach, secretes insulin besides digestive juice (above). If cells of Langerhans become diseased and cease to produce enough insulin, the body cannot burn sugar, which is retained in the blood, appears in urine: diabetes mellitus is present. Fats burn incompletely without carbohydrates, producing fatty acids, leading to acid poisoning, death.

Insulin from pancreas of animals, injected into diabetics—though it does not cure—checks disease, averts complications, allows surgical operations. (Discovery of Drs. Banting and Best, 1921.) Everybody should test urin for sugar: Fill into a test tube 1 teaspoonful (cca.5ccm) Benedict solution (copper sulphate, sodium citrate, carbonate); add 8 drops of after chief-meal urine, mix; place test tube into boiling water for five minutes. If excess sugar present, color gets opaque, broken blue (traces); green precipitate, ¼%); yellow (1%); red (2%). Consult physician. Transparent blue is normal (up to 0,03% sugar) (Gen. Science)

DAVID COPPERFIELD LOSES DORA, HIS YOUNG WIFE

David has an evil time with an ignorant and cruel schoolmaster, with whom his stepfather placed him. Heartbroken, his mother passes away. Murdstone makes David work in his wine plant for a pittance. David runs away to his aunt Betsy Trotwood in Dover, who places him in Dr. Strong's school, Canterbury, where he lodges with the Wickfields. Successful in school and later as assistant to Dr. Strong, David marries Dora, daughter of a friend, Mr. Spenlow, who died and left her unprovided for. Soon she became fatally ill.

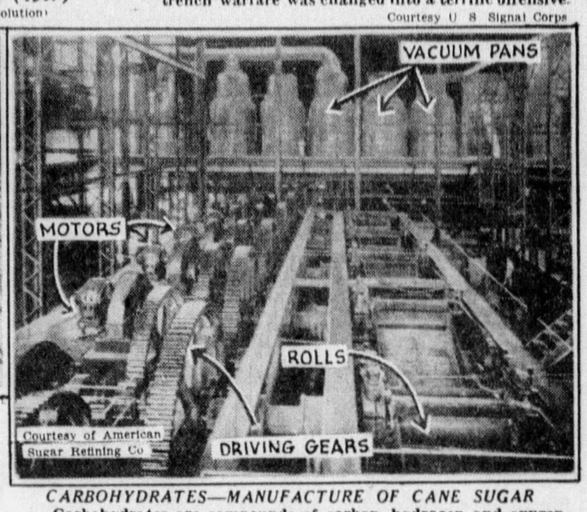
UNITS OF LIGHT MEASUREMENT

One candlepower is the strength of lamp equal in intensity to the standard candle, made and burned according to specifications. One lumen is the quantity of light falling on one square foot area of a sphere of one foot radius from a light source of one candlepower in center. Such a sphere having 12.57 square feet area, the total light produced by one candlepower is 12,57 lumens. One footcandle is unit of intensity of illumination obtained on one square foot plan area at one foot average distance from one candlepower.



CARBOHYDRATES—MANUFACTURE OF CANE SUGAR

Carbohydrates are compounds of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen (twice as many H as O atoms). Most important: 1. Complex sugars (disaccharides, $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$): Sucrose (cane, beet, maple sugar), maltose (malt sugar), lactose (milk sugar) 2. Simple sugars (monosaccharides, $C_6H_{12}O_6$): dextrose (glucose or grape sugar), levulose (fructose or fruit sugar), galactose, mannose, xylose, etc. 3. Polysaccharides, like starch and cellulose ($C_6H_{10}O_5$) X (X being a whole number).

In the manufacture of raw cane sugar, cane is crushed between rolls (above), juice boiled with $Ca(OH)_2$ to neutralize, prevent fermentation; CO_2 added removes excess lime. Liquid is then filtered through animal charcoal, concentrated in vacuum pans, left to crystallize; crystals are separated from brown liquid (molasses) by centrifuging.

Raw sugar is dark, must be refined by dissolving in hot water and largely repeating the former process. Crystals dried in a heated tube, give granulated sugar. Beet sugar is made in a similar way from beet extract. Rated by sweetness, sucrose has 100, levulose, 173, glucose (dextrose) 74, maltose 32, lactose 16. Honey is a mixture chiefly of dextrose and levulose.

Complex sugars when hydrolyzed yield simple sugars: $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11} + H_2O = C_6H_{12}O_6 + C_6H_{12}O_6$ which may have different properties by different grouping of atoms. (Chemistry)

Bugs Baer

If I Were King

Well, the paper asks The Bug what he would do if he were mayor of New York City.

First thing The Bug would do would be to demand a recount.

Then we would run things so that the next administration would have something to investigate.

You ain't had any fun as mayor of anything unless your successor is elected on the Reform ticket.

About the third year of our administration we would get on a sight-seeing bus and ask the barker to show us the location of City Hall.

We would greet distinguished visitors and fight all attempts to extradite them. If a policeman arrested a burglar we would take the policeman's fingerprints and fine hook and ladder companies for parking by fire plugs.

We would be for justice for anybody who could afford it. We would throw both rivers open to the public. If they are going to sell liquor in clothing stores we would make them give two pairs of pants with every bottle of rye.

If the opposition discovered graft in New York The Bug would recite Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg and make them think it happened there.

If The Bug saw a brute kicking a dog, stepping on flowers or making faces at babies, The Bug would put him on the reception committee. No citizen could serve on a jury unless he was related to the prisoner. If anybody objected to this we would kick him so high he could pose arm in arm with the Statue of Liberty. We are for law and order. But never for both of them at the same time.

We would have musical dinner pails so when people weren't working they could play in orchestras. Every night we would write out our resignation and make Postmaster Jim Farley tear it up. We wouldn't care what they said about us so long as the pictures turned out good.

If you want to vote for The Bug on this platform we will give you $2 for your vote.

We know we could always sell it to our esteemed opponent for three.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

As parents of sons and daughters who have been unemployed for some time, you have become caustic at time in alluding to that fact.

You even accuse them of not trying to procure jobs.

You emphasize your opinin that they are lazy and too well pleased with a life of leisure to ever amount to anything worth while.

As a matter of fact many young people are indolent.

Many are not averse to living without working, if possible.

The great majority of youth desire employment if for no other reason than that of having money to spend for things they cannot have without earning it.

You have often said that in your youth you could get work.

Often it was unpleasant work with little remuneration, but it was a job.

You took any kind of a job till you could get something better.

Conditions then and now are quite different.

Many young people who are idle today would accept any kind of work and like it if they could find it.

Don't make life any harder for your own than is necessary.

If parents won't understand and sympathize, who will?

The energetic young person unable to get a job is having enough worry; don't add to it.

The Purpose in Picturing War's Horrors Is To Keep War Away From Us

THE UNCENSORED World War pictures appearing in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst papers will, it is hoped, make an instant appeal to the thoughtful attention of our readers.

They are stern and forbidding.

They tell, as words cannot, the grim truth of war—its woes, anguish, killing labors, unsupportable sufferings, its havoc, the rayless night and black despair which engulf the soul. But why, you say, —remind us of these things?

LEST WE FORGET!

* * *

THERE IS an old saying—"The age of the crowd does not change—it is always the same."

Inexperience and ignorance are born into the world as fast as knowledge of life and the teaching of experience die out of the world. The lessons learned in sorrow by one generation are soon forgotten. Each new generation seems to bring to the problems of existence all the folly and passion which are man's inheritance, without the corrective and sobering restraint which it could learn from the past.

IODINE: Dead and wounded at a dressing station for British troops, a shell-torn farmhouse in France after a general attack.

We elder folk who lived through the great war and the men, now in middle life, who made up our fighting forces, know only too well what war means. We saw its actualities. We need no reminder of its horrors. They can never be forgotten.

The transport laden down with human beings stowed away at night like inanimate material in racks built of gas pipe!

The victim dead of veritable epidemics, which swept these crowded vessels, tossed into the sea like ship's refuse!

The cold and sodden dug-outs, not fit for beasts of the field, in which our fellow humans lived for months that passed into years!

The back-breaking and unceasing toil, the squalor, the fast-spreading disease, the blood-soaked fields, the ghastly carnage of actual encounter, the appalling mutilations, the life-long disfigurements, the crippled helplessness, the unspeakable horrors endured by the wounded and the dying, the neglect, the cruelty, the barbarity that seemed to strike and sever from mankind every attribute of humanity.

And in every direction, cutting off escape, death—multiform death—lurking, but alert —reaching for our men, clutching at our sons —wasting our homes, undermining the nation's strength and making mock of every hope and labor of mankind.

THIS WAS WAR! AND WAR WILL EVERMORE BE THIS!

* * *

LET THE pictures tell their tragic tale. Let them speak to our resolves—steel-firm our purpose and granite-found our determination —TO KEEP OUT OF WAR!

AND TO KEEP WAR AWAY FROM US!

WE WILL NOT be involved in foreign entanglements, and we mean to keep foreign entanglements at a safe remoteness from ourselves!

We will not tolerate foreign interference in our affairs, nor will we suffer an undue foreign sympathy to involve us in interference in the affairs of other nations.

We propose to have an invincible national defense, with the power at all times to keep the war-like nations of the world out of our country.

* * *

ON SEA AND land our national defense must be impregnable.

Without aggressive purpose of our own, we do not intend to be the victim of aggression by others.

Today,—with infinite regret, we say it—the war curse seems hovering over the world as plainly as ever in the past.

Hostility and suspicion seem everywhere to menace peace. Vanity and boasting, provocation and defiance are urging on the apparently helpless human race to a new immolation.

Let us learn at least the lessons of our own experience.

Let us take to heart, now as never before, the admonition of Washington—summoning the strength, which we possess in abundance, if we will only use it wisely, to make good our security against attack, and to make respected throughout the world our traditional aloofness from the world's quarrels.

The Automobile Show

Every Person Who Desires to Be Well-Informed Should See the New Cars—Comment on Local News.

Pittsburgh's annual automobile show at Motor Square Garden will be formally opened tonight. Twenty-three makes of passenger cars will be shown, as well as trucks and accessories. Everybody who desires to be well-informed should attend the exhibition. The new automobiles have improvements which are worth seeing.

It is gratifying to learn that Pittsburgh's police court magistrates and other petty judges who discharge bootleggers and speakeasy proprietors, or let them off with light fines, instead of holding them for the grand jury, as the law requires, are not going to be allowed to "get away" with it. The illegal liquor traffic must be stamped out.

We welcome the announcement of Dr. Ben Graham, superintendent of the city's public schools, that a new history text has been adopted which deals adequately with the part that Pennsylvania has played in the story of the nation. Other schools in Pennsylvania should follow this good example. Adults, too, would do well to familiarize themselves with the state's history.

Dr. C. Hale Sipe, who, by his books and lectures, has done more than anyone else to arouse interest in the glorious beginnings in Pennsylvania, lectured to 35,000 Pennsylvania school teachers in 1932 on the coming of the Swedes who established a permanent colony in Pennsylvania prior to the arrival of William Penn.

Dr. Sipe requested that teachers who knew the names of the ships that brought the first settlers to our state or the name of the Governor of New Sweden raise their hands. Not a hand went up. Yet the pupils of all of them, of course, could name without hesitation the ship that brought the first settlers to Massachusetts, and could tell much about Miles Standish.

We are all acquainted with the stories of the Salem "witches" and Paul Revere's Ride and the Boston Tea Party; but few are familiar with the no less interesting or important stories of the gallant Eighth Pennsylvania's mid-winter march from Kittanning to join Gen. Washington or of the thrilling exploit of the Pittsburgh boys who went to New Orleans in 1777 to get gunpowder to fight the British.

It looks as though some of the statements to the effect that the CWA is being used for political purposes in Pennsylvania were themselves issued for political purposes. It is no doubt true that politicians have tried to help certain applicants for CWA jobs by giving them commendatory letters, but we have seen no clear-cut evidence that it was difficult to obtain such a job without political "pull."

We doubt that the CWA is a Pinchot machine, or a Guffey machine, or a Martin machine, or any other kind of political machine. Nevertheless, there may have been at least a little "chiseling" back of the sweeping charges that are being made; and to restore public confidence a careful investigation should be made under federal auspices.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—In the dark of the moon, as it were, my wife and I have been plucking flowers from the garden of memory. One we loved, her mother, has been lowered gently to rest on the river-bend brow of a snow-capped hill overlooking scenes of our Ohio childhood. And we feel strangely forlorn.

Most of our married life she has been a member of the household, traveling with us to Europe and every section of America, a complete refutation of the mother-in-law joke. To us she was "Mud," an inelegant bestowal, but fraught with the tenderest affection.

There is pardonable pride in revealing that with such close association not a single harsh word ever passed between us. When I stumbled and fell, I took my bruises to her. Instead of deserved scorn, she had that magnificent compassion that seems only the essence of mellowed years.

When we saw her begin to fail, she had lived 79 healthful years. In her final year she palely loitered toward the last illusion with a fortitude memory will never dim. In a lucid flicker out of comatose, her last words were a mumbled half sigh for "being such a bother."

* * *

To our friends she was "Aunt Kate," soft voiced and with snow-white hair and the pink complexion of a healthy girl. Until after 60, she had rarely been beyond the confines of her native Ohio. Yet she adjusted herself to a cosmopolitanism with no dilution of the charm of those cloistered years on the ivy-clad porch of a small community.

* * *

Notable worldlings such as Frazier Hunt, Floyd Gibbons, Irvin Cobb, Raymond Dickson, Tommy Millard, Carl Seitz, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Harry Silvey, Will and Mike Hogg would drop in to see "Aunt Kate" and sit for hours. They found refreshment in her gentle philosophies so sharply in contrast to blusters of the world. There was little in modern literature or the classics she could not discuss. She read the Bible daily and often eight books a week, most of the periodicals and was abreast current topics.

* * *

And now that she has passed from mortal sight, so many remembered scenes blow across the peaceful pasturelands that "Aunt Kate" seemed to nurture. About them somehow cling mingled aromas of dog fennel, smart weed, golden rod, wild roses, honeysuckle! The scents of a half asleep but serenely contented town.

* * *

From the coolly arbored recesses of "Aunt Kate's" porch we see men from the furniture factory going from work. Nearly all would call to her "Good evenin', Mrs. Small." This was almost her sole contact with life's hurry.

* * *

Of course, there were more leisurely wayfarers who passed along State street at intervals. Editor Will Sibley, who wrote "The French Five Hundred." Lawyer Hollis Johnston. George Bovie, Capt. Ed Maddy, Mr. Dages, who lived in the big brick house on the corner, wore a high silk hat and puttered among his roses. He was Mr. Dages, as Ring Lardner might say, "the shoe manufacturing people." Joe Sheline, the town's tragic, gnarled man of all work with his wheelbarrow. He lived across the creek near the Le Blanc peach orchard and grubbed so desperately to educate his 11 children. Dude Robinson, the colored barber. Mr. Wetherholt, the undertaker.

* * *

Evenings always took on a mild carnival tint on maple shaded State street. Neighbors and their children spruced up to sit on porches and watch those out driving go by. It was a sartorial simplicity "Aunt Kate" never abandoned. There is a specious legend that wine, no matter how long casked, remains always en rapport with its native vineyard.

* * *

When vineyards flower each year, the barreled vintage fumes and bubbles. A chemical heredity. The analogy is that every sundown of her life in the city "Aunt Kate" followed the back yonder custom of "dressing up." Her porch became an apartment house window. I've wondered if metropolitan strangers did not become to her Mr. Dages, Capt. Maddy, Mr. Wetherholt and Joe Sheline.

* * *

In her tired trembling hand between the leaves of "Anthony Adverse" the last book she read we found, the day after her removal to the hospital, this copied line from "The Song of Songs" in the Old Testament: "For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone."

Human Side of the News

Capt. Achmed Abdullah, Grand-Nephew of the Emir of Afghanistan, and His Adventures

By Edwin C. Hill

HE abides in a New York penthouse, a bungalow in Hollywood or a cabin in Maine, as the season calls for or the mood impels. All countries, all capitals are much the same to him, from Boston to Beluchistan. He has stridden through life at an eager gait, the taste of adventure salty on his lips. Wars and stratagems, intrigue and espionage have been his business.

We know him best as Capt. Achmed Abdullah, but he has the right to be addressed, when he so wishes, by the title of "Prince" —Prince Nadir Khan Durani. For he is of the blood—the grand-nephew, indeed—of that ruthless old Emir of Afghanistan of whom Kipling wrote. From this race and this land, from the mountain men, swaggering ruffians in their stone watch towers and the great hills beyond the Khyber Pass, Capt. Abdullah directly descends.

He is vividly in my mind because he has just written a new book; a book warm from the presses; a delightful book, no naughtier than it should be, bounding and leaping with action, gay as Pippa's song and incandescent with the pure glow of romance. He calls it "The Cat Had Nine Lives," and it is the tale, as believable as anyone need wish, of the amazing adventures in love and war, in great cities and black jungles, among princes and witch doctors, of this gentleman who was at odd times a soldier of fortune and a British military spy.

* * *

A Wanderer Over Four Continents

HIS Russian father, noted in Continental Europe for his slow horses and fast women, was constantly being exiled for the maddest of escapades.

It was perfectly natural, therefore, that Achmed Abdullah, this grand-nephew of an Emir of Afghanistan, became an adventurer and a wanderer over four continents, swinging from London's Mayfair to the Roof of the World, fighting and spying, seeing one of his best friends killed in a duel over a worthless woman, losing his shirt at poker to the King of Montenegro, lunching with a brace of French dukes so old-fashioned that they wore side elastics and used gold toothpicks, and with New York women so modern that they sympathized with gangsters, spinach and technocracy and were violently opposed to God, white bread, army colonels, athletes and suburban matrons.

Of this man, Achmed Abdullah, one gets something of his flavor despite his English overlay, in spite of his spats and monocle and his Oxford accent, by the tales he tells of the visits paid to London by his grandfather, a brother of that bloody-handed old border thief, his great-uncle, Abdur-Rahman, the Emir.

He went to England—the grandfather, Nadir Khan—whenever his cashbox needed filling, for England needed him as much as he needed England. His border thieves and his guarded mountain passes blocked the way of the Russian Bear down into the Plain of Hindustan. That was worth much British gold, and well did the shrewd old rascal, Achmed's grandfather, know it! So the Foreign Office petted him and filled his pockets and off he went, usually to Karlsbad, for the cure.

* * *

Second Class 'Not Good Enough'

ON one such occasion, as Capt. Abdullah himself relates the the story, King Edward, still Prince of Wales, introduced him to a Viennese banker named Sigmund Rosenfeld. Old Nadir Khan reached into his capacious pocket and pulled out the Afghan House Order of the Second class, glittering with off-color diamonds and chipped and cracked emeralds. He pinned the decoration upon the breast of the delighted banker. That winter, back in Vienna, Rosenfeld visited a jeweler. He had the worthless diamonds and emeralds replaced with flawless, precious stones.

A year or two passed and Nadir Khan went again to Karlsbad for the cure. Again he met the banker, sporting the made-over decoration, and the old Pathan's eyes gleamed when he saw the fine stones. He spoke to Rosenfeld:

"I give you House Order?"
"Yes, your Royal Highness."
"House Order, Second Class, heh?"
"Yes, your Royal Highness."
"Not good enough for you. Must have House Order First Class by Allah!"

And from the banker's chest he plucked the blazing star and plopped it into his pocket, and from the same pocket he took a House Order of the First Class, studded with yet worse off-color diamonds and chipped emeralds, and pinned it upon the Austrian's breast.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

A New Year Creed

I wrote this for myself for the New Year. A bit late to hand it on—but perhaps it'll help.

MY NEW YEAR CREED

I am about to begin another year. I want to make a success of it. I want to do better things with myself and for my world than I have ever done before. And I believe that the best way to start will be to set down the truth about my world—and myself.

I'm too old to kid myself about this world. Once I thought it was a sort of Enchanted Land with a pot of gold waiting at the foot of every rainbow. There's no excuse for me if I continue to believe such fairy tales—or whine because they don't come true.

* * *

It isn't an Enchanted Place. It isn't even a civilized place. It is a supremely beautiful, interesting, dangerous, undeveloped place which, a comparatively short time ago, was a mass of boiling mud. And it is filled with not-too beautiful, but even more interesting, undeveloped and dangerous people, who act, much of the time, as if they, too, were filled with boiling mud.

But there's nothing depressing in this fact. It need not, should not, make me bitter. It does not prove that this world is a hell hole. It does not prove that people are devils. It merely means that the combination is still young —that we and our world are just getting under way—that we've a long way to go, and that we've done pretty well so far, everything considered.

So there's the truth about the world and the people with which I must live for the coming year. And how does it add up? To this:

I CAN'T EXPECT TO GO ALONG TAKING THINGS EASY AND TRUSTING THAT EVERYONE WILL BE KIND AND FAIR TO LITTLE ELSIE! THIS WORLD AND THIS RACE BEING STILL BOTH SAVAGE AND STUPID, I'LL HAVE TO WATCH MY STEP. AND IT WILL BE MY OWN BAD LUCK IF I DON'T!

That does 't mean I won't find love and justice, courage and honor, generosity and noble sacrifice. To the contrary, I will find these lovely miracles every day, all around me—as I have always found them. And I will find them in such abundance that they will offset any hate or harm that can come to me from the darker side of life.

More than that—behind this growing miracle of love in the human heart, I will sense a greater, shining Presence that has never failed, will never fail His troubled world. His bewildered children. I will not see that Presence clearly, for my sight is dim and my understanding dull. But I will always know that He is there and sometimes, I will enter—for an instant—into His peace and glory.

There's the truth about my world and my neighbors—and the greatest Neighbor of all. Surely that isn't a very depressing outlook! A bit chancy—no place for sissies or snivelers—but a pretty swell outlook, taking it all in all.

And now the truth about myself. Whatever I've said about the other fellow goes for me, too. If he's just getting underway, so am I. If he is still tainted with jungle hate and fear, conceit and greediness, so am I.

BUT IF HE'S COMING OUT OF IT—COMING INTO A MORE BRAVE AND FRIENDLY SPIRIT —LEARNING TO WALK UPRIGHT AND GIVE A HAND TO THE OTHER FELLOW—SO AM I!

AND SO, I'M GOING TO START THIS NEW YEAR BY BELIEVING IN THREE THINGS —MY NEIGHBOR, MYSELF AND GOD.

No matter what happens, no matter how hard the going, I'm going to believe that we three are a grand combination—that we have joined forces in a great adventure—AND THAT SOONER OR LATER WE ARE GOING TO WIN OUT!

That being so—WATCH MY DUST!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Undefined Kinship

Along the river road I ride
And watch the eager, tawny tide.
Fast widening now, in drawing near
The sea, so long desired, so dear.
The cypress trees wear veils of moss
Which in the strong, fresh sea-winds toss,
The great pines thrust their branches high
Into the semi-tropic sky.

And never down this road I go
But comes a drive I used to know
To my mind's vision once again.
A narrow, dusty, country lane
Where elm trees' branches meet above
And through the golden wheat fields move
Slow breezes, touched with August heat
And breath of honeysuckle sweet.

Here, wheeling sea gulls, flashing white,
And there, the larks' clear-voiced delight;
All things unlike, yet near the sea
This inland scene comes back to me.
What subtle kinship, undefined,
Pairs these two pictures in my mind?

Text for Today

steal:—Matthew, vi:19. Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and
